CONSCIOUS LOVERS.

COMEDY.

Written by

Sir RICHARD STEELE.A

Illud genus narrationis quod in personis positum oft, debet babere sermonis festivitatem, animorum dissimilitudinem, gravitatem, lenitatem, spem, mesum, suspicionem, desiderium, dissimulationem, miseri-cordiam, rerum varietates, fortune commutationem, insperatum incommodum, subitam letitiom, jucum, dum exitum rerum. Cic. Rhetor. ad Herenn. Lib. 1.

LONDON;
Printed for T. JOHNSON.
M. DCC. XXIII

THI

CONSCIOUS LOVERS

A

COMEDY

Widen by

SURICHARD STEELD

diet einer einen geloof er gerjous postuers oft, diet eine eine geloof geloof eine geloof geloof eine geloof geloo

to

en

This tick all and the

of Roy the tha

Printed for T. JOH N.SON.
MADCG XXIII

TOTHE

K I N G.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY,

A Fier having affired to the Highest and most Laudable Ambition, that of following the Cause of Liberty, I should not have humbly petitioned Your Majesty for a Direction of the Theatre, had I not believed Success in that Province an Happiness much to be wished by an Honest Man, and highly conducing to the Prosperity of the Common-wealth. It is in this View I lay before Your Majesty a Comedy, which the Audience, in Justice to themselves, has supported and encouraged, and is the Prelude of what, by Your Majesty's Influence and Favour, may be attempted in survey ture Representations.

The Imperial Mantle, the Royal Vestment; and the shining Diadem are what strike ordinary Minds; Bu: Your Majesty's Native Goodness, Your passion for Justice, and Her constant Assessor Mercy, is what continually surrounds you, in the View of intelligent Spirits, and gives Hope to the Suppliant, who sees he has more than succeeded in giving Your Majesty an Opportunity of doing Good. Our King is above the Greatness of Royalty, and every Act of His Will which makes another Man happy, has ten times more Charms in it, than one that makes Himself appear rais'd above the HIT!

Con-

Condition of others; but even this carries Unhappiness with it; for Calm Dominion, Equal Grandeur and Familiar Greatness do not easily affect the Imagination of the Vulgar, who cannot see Power but in Terror; and as Fear moves mean Spirits, and Love prompts Great ones to obey, the Insinuations of Malecontents are directed accordingly; and the unhappy People are insuard, from Want of Reslection, into Disrespectful Ideas of their Gracious and Amiable Sovereign; and then only begin to apprehend the Greatness of their Master, when they have incurred his Displeasure.

As Your Majesty was invited to the Ihrone of a Willing People, for their own sakes, and has ever enjoy'd it with Contempt of the Ostentation of it, we be seech You to Protect us who revere Your Title as we love Your Person. "Tis to be a Savage to be a Rebel, and they who have fall'n from You have not so much sorfeited their Allegiance, as lost their Humanity. And therefore, if it were only to preserve my self from the Imputation of being amongst the Insensible and Abandon'd, I would be Permission in the most publick manner possible, to profess my self, with the utmost Since.

SIRES IN ES

100

Cour Majesty's

Most Devoted Subject

doing Good. Cay King is above the Greatures of in the that water Time of appear raid above the

and Servant

sure Reprolementations."

RICHARD STEELE.

Leading Titel Mint, for any.

nd

on T;

nts re ful nd

ir

11-

e.

we ch

nd

be

71-

#-

.

PREFACE

THIS Comedy has been receiv'd with univer-I fal Acceptance, for it was in every Part excellently perform'd; and there needs no other Applause of the Actors, but that they excell'd according to the Dignity and Difficulty of the Character they represented. But this great Favour done to the Work in Acting, renders the Expectation still the greater from the Author, to keep up the Spirit in the Reprefentation of the Closet, or any other Circumstance of the Reader, whether alone or in Company: To which I can only fay, that it must be remember'd a Play is to be Seen, and is made to be Represented with the Advantage of Action, nor can appear but with half the Spirit, without it; for the greatest Effect of a Play in reading is to excite the Reader togo fee it; and when he does so, it is then a Play has the Effect of Example and Precept.

The chief Defign of this was to be an innocent Performance, and the Audience have abundantly show'd how ready they are to support what is visibly intended that way; nor do I make any Difficulty to acknowledge, that the whole was writ for the sake of the Scene of the Fourth Act, wherein Mr. Bervill evades the Quarrel with his Friend, and hope it may have some Effect upon the Goths and Vandals that frequent the Theatres, or a more polite Audience may supply their Absence.

A 3

But

But this Incident, and the Case of the Father, and Daughter, are esteem'd by some People no Subjects of Comedy; but I cannot be of their Mind; for any thing that has its Foundation in Happiness and Success, must be allow'd to be the Object of Comedy, and fure it must be an Improvement of it, to introduce a Joy too exquisite for Laughter, that can have no Spring but in Delight, which is the Case of this young Lady. I must therefore contend, that the Tears which were fled on that Occasion flow'd from Reason and Good Sense, and that Men ought not to be laugh'd at for weeping, till we are come to a more clear Notion of what is to be imputed to the Hardness of the Head, and the Softness of the Heart; and I think it was very politely faid of Mr. Wilks to one who told him there was a General weeping for Indiana, I'll warrant he'll fight ne'er the worse for that. To be apt to give way to the Impressions of Humanity is the Excellence of a right Disposition. and the natural Working of a well-turn'd Spirit. But as I have fuffer'd by Criticks, who are got no farther than to enquire whether they ought to be pleas'd or not, I would willingly find them properer Matter for their Employment, and revive here a Song which was omitted for want of a Performer, and delign'd for the Entertainment of Indiana; Sig. Corbonelli inflead of it play'd on the Fiddle, and it is for want of a Singer that fuch advantageous things are faid of an Instrument which were defign'd for a Voice. The Song is the Diffress of a Love-fick Maid, and may be a fit Entertainment for some small Criticks to examine whether the Passion is just, or the Distress Male or Female. which shi good Ball a mol svad Request the 'I heares, or a more polite Audience

From Place to Place forlorn I go; With downcast Eyes a silent Shade; Forbidden to declare my Woe; To speak, till spoken to, afraid.

My inward Pangs, my secret Grief, My foft consenting Looks betray: He Loves, but gives me no Relief: Why speaks not be who may?

t

F

r

it

T

Œ

ľ

h

d

1f

n

0

It remains to fay a Word concerning Terence, and I am extremely furpris'd to find what Mr. Cibber told me, prove a Truth, that what I valued my felf fo much upon, the Translation of him, should be imputed to me as a Reproach. Mr. Cibber's zeal for the work, his Care and application in instructing the Actors, and altering the Disposition of the Scenes, when I was, through Sickness, unable to cultivate fuch things my felf, has been a very obliging Favour and Friendship to me. For this Reason, I was very hardly persuaded to throw away Terense's celebrated Funeral, and take only the bareauthority of the young Man's Character; and how I have work'd it into an Englishman, and made use of the same Circumstances of discovering a Daughter, when we least hop'd for one, is humbly submitted to the Learned Reader.

The Chesten Wir und

To Madelle, Wife and chief, in Fin To might the Champion of your Vertues Louis, Redem from long Contents the Comic Man

PROLOGUE,

By Mr. WELSTED.

win your Hearts, and to fecure your Praise, The Comic-Writers strive by Various Ways: By Subtil Stratagems they act their Game, And leave untry'd no Avenue to Fame. One writes the Spoule a beating from his Wife; And fays, Each stroke was Copy'd from the Life. Some fix all Wit and Humour in Grimace, And make a Livelyhood of Pinkey's Face: Here, One gay Shew and costly Habits tries, Confiding to the Judgment of your Eyes: Another (muts bis Scene (a cunning Shaver.) Sure of the Rakes and of the Wenches Favour. Oft have these Arts prevail'd; and one may guess, If practised o'er again, would find Success. But the bold Sage, the Poet of To-night, By new and desprate Rules resolved to Write; Fain would be give more just Applauses Rise, And please by Wit that scorns the Aids of Vice; The Praise he seeks, from worthier Motives springs, Such Praise, as Praise to those that give it, brings. Your Aid, most bumbly sought, then Britons lend's And Lab'ral Mirth, like Lib'ral Men, defend: No more let Ribaldry, with Licence writ, Usurp the Name of Eloquence or Wit; No more let lawless Farce uncensur d yo, The lowd dull Gleanings of a Smithfield Show, Tis yours, with Breeding to refine the Age, To Chaften Wit, and Moralize the Stage. Te Modest, Wise and Good, ye Fair, ye Brave, To-night the Champion of your Virtues Jave,

To Modest, Wise and Good, ye Fair, ye Bra To-night the Champion of your Virtues save, Redeem from long Contempt the Comic Name, And Judge Politely for your Countrey's Fame.

EPI-

Is

To

A

In

No

N

No

Bl

W

04

Th

W

Ou

M

He

A

Pa

Sof

Th

4

EPILOGUE,

By Mr. WELSTED.

Intended to be Spoken by Indiana.

UR Author, whom intreaties cannot move I Spight of the dear coquetry that you love, Swears be'll not frustrate ( so be plainly means ) By a loofe Epilogue, bis decent Scenes. Is it not, Sirs, bard Fate I meet to-day, To keep me rigid still beyond she Play? And yet I'm fav'd a world of pains that way. I now can look, I now can move at eafe, Nor need I torture these poor limbs, to please; Nor with the hand or foot attempt surprize, Nor wrest my features, nor fatigue my eyes: Bless me! What freakish gambols have I play'd? What motions try'd, and wanton looks betray'd? Out of pure kindness all! to over-rule The threaten'd his, and screen some scribling Fool. With more respect I'm entertain'd to-night: Our Author thinks, I can with eafe delight. My artless looks while modest Graces arm, He says, I need but to appear, and charm. A Wife so form'd, by these examples bred, Pours joy and gladness 'round the Marriage-bed; Soft source of comfort, kind relief from care, And 'tis her least perfection to be fair. The Nymph with Indiana's worth who vies, A Nation will behold with Bevil's eyes.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

M E N. of od bear

Sir TOHN BEVIL. Mr. Mills. Mr. SEALAND. Mr. Williams. BEVIL jun. in love with Indiana. Mr. Booth. MYRTLE, in love with Lucinda. Mr. Wilks. CIMBERTON, a Coxcomb. Mr. Griffin. HUMPHREY, an old Servant to Sir Fohn. Mr. Shepard. Mr. Cibber. Tom, Servant to Bevil jun. Mr. Th. Cibber. DANIEL, a Country Boy, Servant to Indiana.

WOMEN.

Mrs. SEALARD, second Wife to Sealand. Mrs. Moore.

ISABELLA, Sifter to Sealand. Mrs. Thurmond
INDIANA, Sealand's Daughter by his Mrs. Oldfieldfirst Wife.

LUCINDA, Sealand's Daughter by his Mrs. Booth. fecond Wife.

SCENE LONDON.

PHILLIS, Maid to Lucinda.

DRA

Mrs. Younger-

notormos aur

research of the country and the transferring, said of the art

CONSCIOUS LOVERS.

etili eralgili da Ana. C . T. . I. es e galles

SCENE I.

. The Committee . The Policies and The SCENE, Sir John Bevil's House.

Enter Sir John Bevil, and Humphrey.

pd

E

prow to the blank de total de carem living their bis Sir JOHN BEVIL.

TAVE you order'd that I should not be interrupted while I am dreffing? Humph. Yes , Sir: I believ'd you had something of moment to fay to me.

Sir J. Bew. Let me see, Humphrey; I think it is now full forty years fince I first took thee, to be about my

Humph I thank you, Sir, it has been an easy forty years; and I have pass'd 'em without much sickness, care, or labour. of lingues, but the property as at all the worker

Sir 7. Bev. Thou haft a brave constitution; you are a year or two older than I am, Sirrah, so

Humph.

Humph. You have ever been of that mind, Sir,

sir J. Bev. You Knave, you know it; I took thee

for thy gravity, and fobriety, in my wild years.

Humph. Ah Sir! our manners were form'd from our different fortunes, not our different age: Wealth gave a loose to your youth, and proverty put a restraint upon mine.

Sir J. Bev. Well, Humphrey, you know I have been a kind Master to you; I have us'd you, for the ingenuous nature I observ'd in you from the beginning, more like an humble Friendthan a Servant.

Humph. I humbly beg you'll be fo tender of me, as to explain your commands, Sir, without any farther preparation.

Eugstein,

Sir J. Bev. I'll tell thee then. In the first place, this Wedding of my Son's, in all probability, (shut the door) will never be at all.

Humpb. How, Sir! not beat all? for what reason is it carry'd on in appearance?

Sir J. Bev. Honest Humphrey, have patience, and I'll tell thee all in order. I have my self, in some part of my life, liv'd (indeed) with freedom, but, I hope, without reproach. Now, I thought Liberty wou'd be as little injurious to my Son; therefore, as soon as he grew towards Man, I indulg'd him in living after his own manner: I knew not how, otherwise, to judge of his inclination; for what can be concluded from a behaviour under restraint and tear? But what charms me above all expression is, that my Son has never in the least action, the most distant hint or word, valued himself upon that great Estate of his Mother's, which, according to our Marriage settlement, he has had ever since be came to age.

Humph. No, Sir; on the contrary, he seems assaid of appearing to enjoy it, before you or any belonging to you—He is as dependant and resign'd to your will, as if he had not a Farthing but what must come from your immediate bounty—You have ever acted like a good

1

good and generous Father, and he like an obedient and grateful Son.

r

Q.

n

à

r

t

f

Sir J. Bev. Nay, his carriage is so easy to all with whom he converses, that he is never assuming, never prefers himself to others, nor ever is guilty of that rough sincerity which a Man is not call'd to, and certainly disobliges most of his Acquaintance. To be short, Humphrey, his Reputation was so fair in the world, that old Sealand, the great India Merchant, has offer'd his only Daughter, and sole Heiress to that vast Estate of his, as a Wife for him. You may be sure I made no difficulties; the Match was agreed on, and this very day named for the Wedding.

Humph. What hinders the proceeding?

Sir J. Bev. Don't interrupt me. You know, I was last Thursday at the Masquerade; my Son, you may remember, soon found us out—He knew his Grandfather's habit, which I then wore; and tho it was the mode, in the last Age, yet the Maskers, you know, follow'd us as if we had been the most monstrous Figures in that whole Assembly.

Humph. I remember indeed a young Man of Quality in the habit of a Clown, that was particularly trou-blefome, and to the came to me vemole blefome.

Sir J. Bev. Right—He was too much whathe feem'd to be. You remember how impertinently he follow d, and teiz'd us, and wou'd know who we were.

Humph. I know he has a mind to come into that particular.

who led the Lady in the Indian mantle, presented that gay Creature to the Rustick, and bid him (like Cymon in the Fable) grow polite, by falling in love, and let that worthy old Gentleman alone, meaning me: The Clown was not reform'd, but rudely persisted, and offer'd to force off my Mask; with that the Gentleman throwing off his own, appear'd to be my Son, and in his concern for me, tore off that of the Noble.

fh

CI

m

Vi

te

y

man: at this they seiz'd each other; the Company call'd the Guards; and in the surprize, the Lady swoon'd away: Upon which my Son quitted his Adversary, and had now no care but of the Lady, —when raising her in his arms. Art thou gone, cry'd he, for ever—forbid it Heav'n! — She revives at his known voice, —and with the most familiar, tho' modest gesture hangs in safety over his shoulder weeping; but wept as in the arms of one before whom she could give her self a loose, were she not under observation: while she hides her face in his neck, he carefully conveys her from the company.

Humph. I have observ'd this accident has dwelt upon you very strongly.

Sir J. Bev. Her uncommon Air, her noble Modesty, the dignity of her Person, and the occasion it self, drew the whole Assembly together; and I soon heard it buzz'd about, she was the adopted Daughter of a samous Sea-Officer, who had serv'd in France. Now this unexpected and publick discovery of my Son's so deep concern for her—

Humph. Was what I suppose alarm'd Mr. Sealand, in behalf of his Daughter, to break off the Match.

Sir J. Bev. You are right—He came to me yesterday? and said, he thought himself disengaged from the bargain, being credibly informed my Son was already marry'do or worse, to the Lady at the Masquerade. I palliated matters, and insisted on our agreement; but we parted with little less than a direct breach between us.

Humph. Well, Sir, and what notice have you taken of all this to my young Master?

Sir J. Bev, That's what I wanted to debate with you—I have faid nothing to him yet—But look you, Humphrey—if there is so much in this Amour of his, that he denies upon my summons to marry, I have cause enough to be offended. And then by my insisting upon his marrying to-day, I shall know how far he is engeg'd to this Lady in masquerade; and from thence only shall shall be able to take my measures. In the mean time I would have you find out how far that Rogue his Man is let into his secret—He, I know, will play tricks, as much to cross me, as to serve his Master.

Humph. Why do you think fo of him, Sir? I believe he is no worse than I was for you, at your Son's age.

my

n'd

у,

ng

rer

gs in elf

es

he

on

y,

P.

a -

K-

n

in 7

b

d

d

n

C

Sir J. Bev. I fee it in the Rascal's looks. But I have dwelt on these things too long; I'll go to my Son immediately, and while I'm gone, your part is to convince his Rogue Tom that I am in earnest. I'll leave him to you.

Exit Sir John Bevil.

Hymph. Well, the this Father and Son live as well together as possible, yet their fear of giving each other pain, is attended with constant mutual uneasiness. I'm sure I have enough to do to be honest, and yet keep well with them both: But they know I love 'em, and that makes the task less painful however—Oh, here's the Prince of poor Coxcombs, the Representative of all the better fed than taught.—Ho! ho! Tom, whither so gay and so airy this morning?

Enter Tom , Singing .

Tom. Sir, we Servants of fingle Gentlemen are another kind of people then you domestick ordinary Drudges that do business: We are rais'd above you: The pleasures of Board-wages, Tavern-dinners, and many a clear gain;

vails, alas! you never heard or dreamt of-Humph. Thou hast follies and vices enough for a Man of ten Thousand a year, tho 'tis but ast'other day that I sent for you to Town, to put you into Mr. Sealand's Family, that you might learn a little before I put you to my young Master, who is too gentle for training such a rude thing as you were into proper obedience—You then pull'd off your hat to every one you met in the street, like a bashful great aukward Cub as you were. But your great oaken cudgel when you were a Booby, became you much better than than that dangling flick at your button now you are a Fop That's fit for nothing, except it hangs there to be ready for your Master's hand when you are impertinent.

Tom. Uncle Humphrey, you know my Master scoras to strike his Servants. You talk as if the World was now, just as it was when my old Master and you were in your youth—when you went to dinner because it was so much a clock, when the great blow was given in the Hall at the Pantreydoor, and all the Family came out of their holes in such strange dresses and formal faces as you see in the Pictures in our long Gallery in the Country.

Humph. Why, you wild Rogue!

Tom. You could not fall to your dinner till a formal Fellow in a black Gown faid something over the meat, as if the Cook had not made it ready enough.

Humph. Sirrah, who do you prate after?—Despising Men of facred Characters! I hope you never heard my good young Mafter talk fo like a Profligate?

Tom. Sir, I say you put upon me, when I first came to Town, about being orderly, and the doctrine of wearing Shams to make linnen last clean a fortnight, keeping my

h

to

as

ha

25 th

and

he

Ma

Cloths fresh, and wearing a Frock within doors.

Humph. Sirrah, I gave you those Lessons, because I supposed at that time your Master and you might have din'd at home every day, and cost you nothing; then you might have made agood Family Servant. But the Gang you have frequented since at Chocolate houses and Taverns, in a continual round of noise and extravagance—

Tom. I don't know what you heavy Inmates call noise and extravagance; but we Gentlemen, who are well fed, and cut a figure, Sir, think it a fine life, and that we must be very pretty Fellows who are kept only to be

lookedat. or nov ma berole leftile augil idnim nov san Humph. Very well, Sir, — I hope the falhion of being lewd and extravagant, despising of decency and order, is almost at an end, since it is arrived at Persons of your quality.

nad: Master Hamphrey, Ha! Hal you were an unhappy Lad to be sent up to Town in such queer days as you were: Why now, Sir, the Lacquies are the Men of pleasure of the Age; the Top-Gamesters; and many a lac'd Coat about Town have had their Education in our party-colour'd Regiment, —we are false Lovers; have a taste of Musick, Poetry, Billet-doux, Dress, Politicks, ruin Damsels; and when we are weary of this lewd Town, and have a mind to take up, whip into our Masters Wigs and Linnen, and marry Fortunes.

Humph. Hey-day!

OP

for

s to

t as

-

ck,

ey-

ires

el-

s if ling

ood

eto

my

ife I

ave

you

ang

Ta-

oise

well that

o be eing

der,

HOT !

un-

Tom. Nay, Sir, our Order is carry'd up to the highest Dignites and 'distinctions; step but into the Paintted Chamber—and by our Titles you'd take us all for Men of Quality—then again come down to the Court of Requests, and you see us all laying our broken heads together for the good of the Nation: and tho' we never carry a question Nemine Contradicente, yet this I can say with a safe Conscience, (and I wish every Gentleman of our cloth could lay his hand upon his heart and say the same) that I never took so much as a single mug of beer for my Vote in all my life.

Humph. Sirrah, there is no enduring your extravagance; I'll hear you prate no longer: I wanted to fee you, to enquire how things go with your Master, as far as you understand them; I suppose he knows he is to be married to-day.

as the Sun; but, between you and I, my dear, he has a very heavy heart under all that gayety. As foon as he was drefs'd I retir'd, but overheard him figh in the most heavy manner. He walk'd thoughtfully to and fro in the room, then went into his closet; when he came out, he gave me this for his Mistress, whose Maid you know—

Humph. Is paffionately fond of your fine person.

Tom. The poor Fool is fo tender, and loves to hear me talk of the world, and the Plays, Opera s, and

R

Ridotto's, for the winter; the Parks and Bellfize, for our Summer diversions; and Lard! fays she, you are so wild-but you have a world of humour-

Humph. Coxcomb! Well but why don't you run with your Master's Letter to Mrs. Lucinda, as he or-He of Manch.

der'd you?

Tom. Because Mrs. Lucinda is not fo easily come at

as you think form him alwo'r Lwa to be well

Humph, Not eafily come at? Why Sirrah, are not her Father and my old Master agreed, that she and Mr. Bevil are to be one flesh before to-morrow morning?

Tem. It's no matter for that; her Mother, it feems, Mrs. Sealand, has not a greed to it: and you must know, Mr. Humphrey, that in that Family the grey Mare is the better Horse.

Humbh, What do'ft thou mean?

Tem. In one word, Mrs. Sealand. pretends to have a will of her own, and has provided a Relation of hers, a stiff, starch'd Philosopher, and a wife Fool for her Daughter; for which reason, for these ten days past, she has suffer'd no message nor Letter from my Mafter to come near ber-

Humph. And where had you this Intelligence?

Tom. From a coolifh fond Soul, that can keep nothing from me One that will deliver this Letter too, if she is rightly manag'd.

Humph. What , her pretty Hand-maid , Mrs. Phil-

lis ?

Tom. Even she, Sir, this is the very hour, you know, the usually comes hither, under a pretence of a Visit to your Housekeeper forsooth, but in reality to have a glance atad no in the room, then we Humph. Your fweet face, I warrent you.

Tom. Nothing else in nature; you must know, I love to fret, and play with the little Wanton-

Humph. Playwith the little wanton! What will this World come to Tom.

or

fo

un

rat 28 ot

nd or-

is,

cy

07 ve of or

ys

ny

10-00, il-

ou

fa

to

: 6

I

nis

m.

Tom.

Tom. I met her, this morning, in a new Manteau and Petticoat, not a bit the worse for her Lady's wearing; and she has always new thoughts and new airs with new Cloaths—then she never fails to steal some glance or gesture from every Visitant at their house; and is indeed the whole Fown of Coquets at second hand. But here she comes; in one motion she speaks and describes herself better than all the words in the world can.

Humph. Then I hope, dear Sir, when your own affair is over, you will be so good as to mind your Master's with her.

Tom. Dear Humphrey, you know my Master is my Friend, and those are people I never forget.

Humph. Sawciness itself? but I'll leave you to do your best for him.

Enter Phillis.

Phil. Oh, Mr. Thomas, is Mrs. Sugar bey at home?

Lard, one is almost asham'd to pass along the streets. The Town is quite empty, and no body of fashion left in it; and the ordinary People do so stare to see any thing (dres'd like a Woman of condition) as it were on the same floor with them, pass by Alas! Alas! it is a sad thing to walk. Oh Fortune! Fortune!

Tom. What ! a fad thing to walk, Why; Madami

Phillis, do you wish your self lame?

Phil. No, Mr. Tom, but I wish I were generally carry'd in a Coach or Chair, and of a Fortune neither to stand nor go, but to totter, or slide, to be short-sighted, or stare, to sleer in the face, to look distant, to observe, to overlook, yet all become me; and, if I was rich, I cou'd twire and loll as well as the best of them. Oh Tom! Tom! is it not a pity, that you shou'd be so great a Coxcomb, and I to great a Co-quet, and yet be such poor Devils as we are?

Tom. Mrs. Phillis, I am your humble Servant for Phil. Yes, Mr. Themas, I know how much you are my humble Servant, and know what you faid to Mrs. Judy, upon feeing her in one of her Lady's caft Manteaus; That any one wou'd have thought her the Lady, and that she had ordered the other to wear it till it sat easy—for now only it was becoming:—To my Lady it was only a covering, to Mrs. Judy it was a habit. This you said, after some body or other. Oh, Tom! Tom! thou art as salse and as base, as the best Gentleman of them all: but, you Wretch, talk to me no more on the old odious subject Don't, I say.

dam. I know not how to relift your commands, Ma-

Phil. Commands about parting are grown mighty easy to you of late.

Tom. Oh, I have her; I have nettled and put her into the right temper to be wrought upon; and fet a prating. [Afide.]—Why truly, to be plain with you, Mrs. Phillis, I can take little comfort of late in frequenting your house.

Phil. Pray, Mr. Thomas, what is it all of a fudden offends your nicety at our house?

Tem. I don't care to speak particulars, but I dislike the whole.

Phil. I thank you, Sir, I am a part of that whole.

Tom. Mistake me not, good Phillis.

Phil. Good Phillis! Saucy enough. But however— Tom. I fay, it is that thou art a part, which gives ame pain for the disposion of the whole. You thust know, Madam, to be serious, I am a Man, at the bottom, of prodigious nice honour. You are too much expos'd to company at your house. To be plain, I don't like so many, that wou'd be your Mistress's Lovers, whispering to you.

Phil. Don't think to put that upon me. You fay

this, because I wrung you to the heart, when I touch'd your guilty Conscience about Judy.

Tom. Ah Phillis! Phillis! if you but knew my heart!

7 0

OU

to

he

it

ly T.

kI

Phil. I know too much on't-

Tom. Nay then, poor Crispo's Fate and mine are one---Therefore give me leave to fay, or fing at least, as he does upon the same occasion----

Se vedette, &c. [fings.]

Phil. What, do you think I'm to be fob'd off with a Song? I don't question but you have sung the same.

to Mrs, Fudy too.

Tom. Don't disparage your charms, good Phillis, with jealousy of so worthless an object; besides, she is a poor Hussey, and if you doubt the sincerity of my Love, you will allow me true to my interest. You are a Fortune, Phillis----

Phil. What wou'd the Fop beat now? In good time

indeed, you shall be setting up for a Fortune!

Tom. Dear Mrs. Phillis, you have such a spirit that we shall never be dull in Marriage, when we come together. But I tell you, you are a Fortune, and you have an Estate in my hands.

[He pulls out a Purfe, she eyes it.]

Phil. What pretence have I to what is in your hands, Mr. Tom?

Tom. As thus: there are hours, you know, when a Lady is neither pleas'd or displeas'd, neither sick or well, when she lolls or loiters, when she's without desires, from having more of every thing than she knows what to do with.

Phil. Well, what then?

SCEME

Tom. When the has not life enough to keep her bright eyes quite open, to look at her own dear image in the glass.

Phil.

Phil. Explain thy felf, and don't be fo ford of thy own prating

Tom. There are also prosperous and good-natur'd moments, as when a knot or a patch is happily fix'd; when the Complexion particularly flourishes

Phil Well, what then? I have not patience!

Tom. Why then __ or on the like occasion----we Servants who have skill to know how to time bufiness, see when such a pretty tolded thing as this [ shews a Letter] may be presented, laid, or dropp'd, as best suits the present humour And, Madam, because it is a long wearisome journey to run through all the several stages of a Lady's temper, my Master, who is the most reasonable Man in the world, presents you this to bear your charges on the road.

[Gives ber the Purfe.

Phil. Now you think me a corrupt Husley out

Tom Oh fie, I only think you'll take the Letter.

Phil. Nay, I know you do, bur I know my own innocence; I take it for my Miftress's fake.

Tom I know it, my Pretty-one, I know it.

Phil Yes, I say I do it, because I wou'd not have my Mistress deluded by one who gives no proof of his Paffion; but I'll talk more of this, as you fee me on my way home_No, Tom, I affure thee I take this trash of thy Master's , not for the value of the thing, but as it convinces me he has a true respect for my Mistress. I remember a Verse to the purpose, there are hours, you know, when a They may be false who languish and complain, But they who part with money never feign. and w strong more of every thing that the knows what Phil. Well when then?

B 3

Tems When the his not life course to keep her bright eyes quite oven, to look at her own dear-image in the wil than I share.

SCENE II.

d l;

i-

is

,

h

r,

ė.

n

C

Bevil Junior's Lodgings.

the fire son a Commission

Devil junior, Reading.

Bev. jun. These moral writers practise Virtue after death: This charming Vision of Mirza! Such an Author confulted in a morning, fets the Spirit for the vicissitudes of the day, better than the glass does a Man's person: But what a day have I to go thro! to put on an easy look with an aking heart. --- If this Lady my Father urges me to marry should not refuse me, my dilemma is insupportable. But why should I fear it is not she in equal distress with me? has not the Letter, I have fent her this morning, confest, my inclination to another? Nay, have I not moral affurauces of her engagements too, to my Friend Mystle. It's impossible but the must give in to it: For , sureto be deny'd is a favour any Man may pretend to. It must be fo--- Well then, with the affurance of being rejected I think I may confidently say to my Father, I am ready to marry her ---- Then let me refolve upon (what I am not very good at , tho' it is ) an honest distinut's, true, but you have not been cargonner kvery

Enter Tom, Values Boy awards

Tom. Sir John Revil, Sir, is in the next room, Bev, jun Dunce! Why did not you bring him in?
Tom. I told him, Sir, you were in your Closet.
Bev. jun. I thought you had known, Sir, it was my duty to see my Father any where.

[Geing him/elf to the deer.

Tom. The Devil's in my Master! he has always more

B 4

Bevil Jun. introducing Sir John.

Bev. jun. Sir, you are the most gallant, the most complaisant of all Parents—Sure tis not a Compliment to say these lodgings are yours—. Why wou'd you not walk in, Sir?

Sir 7. Rev. I was loth to interrupt you unseasonably on your wedding day.

Bev. jun. One to whom I am beholden for my brith-day, might have used less ceremony.

Sir 7. Beb. Well, Son, I have intelligence you have writ to your Mistress this morning: It would please my curiosity to know the contents of a Wedding day Letter; for Courtship must then be over.

Bev jun. I affure you, Sir, there was no infolence in it, upon the prospect of such a vast Fortune's being added to our Family; but much acknowledgment of the Lady's greater defert.

Sir J. Bev. But, dear Jack, are you in earnest in all this? And will you really marry her?

Sir? nay, any inclination that I saw you bent upon?

Sir J. Bev. Why, I can't say you have, Son; but methinks in this whole business, you have not been so warm as I could have wish'd you: You have visited her, it's true, but you have not been particular. Every one knows you can say and do as handsome things as any Man; but you have done nothing, but liv'd in the general; been complaisant only.

Bev. jun. As I am ever prepar'd to marry if you bid me, so I am ready to let it alone if you will have me.

Sir J. Bev. Look you there now! why what am

I to think of this so absolute and so indifferent a resi-

Bee jun: Think? that I am still your Son, Sir, - Sir, -you

you have been married, and I have not: And you have, sir, found the inconvenience there is, when a Man weds with too much Love in his head. I have been told, Sir, that at the time you married, you made a mighty buftle on the occasion. There was challenging and fighting, scaling walls—locking up the Lady—and the Gallant under an Arrest for fear of killing all his Rivals—Now, Sir, I suppose you having found the ill consequences of these strong passions and prejudices, in preference of one Woman to another, in case of a Man's becoming a Widower—

Sir 7. Bev. How is this!

e.

oft

nt

ot

ly

hve

ly

T;

ce

ot

11

S,

it lo

T,

ne

ly

eid

d.

m î-

u

Bev. jun. I say Sir, Experience has made you wiser in your care of me—for, Sir, since you lost my dear Mother, your time has been so heavy, so lonely, and so tasteless, that you are so good as to guard me against the like unhappiness, by marrying me prudentially by way of bargain and sale. For, as you well judge, a Woman that is espous'd for a Fortune, is yet a better bargain, if she dies; for then a Man still enjoys what he did marry, the Money; and is disencumber'd of what he did not marry, the Woman.

Sir J. Bev. But pray , Sir , do you think Lucinda then a Woman of fuch little merit?

Bev jun. Pardon me, Sir, I don't carry it so far neither; I am rather afraid I shall like her too well; she has, for one of her Fortune, a great many needless and superfluous good qualities.

Sir J. Bev. I am afraid, Son, there's fomething I don't fee yet, fomething that's smother'd under all this raillery.

Bev. jun. Not in the least, Sir: If the Lady is dress'd and ready, you see I am. I suppose the Lawyers are ready too.

Hum. This may grow warm, if I don't interpole. [ Afide. Sir, Mr. Sealand is at the Coffee house, and has sent to speak with you.

Sir J. Bev. Oh! that's well! Then I warrant the Lawyers are ready. Son, you'll be in the way, you fay—

Bevil Jun. If you please, Sir, I'll take a Chair, and go to Mr. Sealand's, where the young Lady and I will wait your leifure.

B 5

, Sin & Bow By no means—The old Fellow will be fo vain, if he fees nd the me ouvell

Bev jan. Ay - But the young Lady, Sir, will think me t the time you maryled; you made -dayshibmid Humph Ay_there you are right-press your readimess to go to the Bride - he won't let you. f Afide to Bev. jun.

Bou. jun. Are you fure of that? ( Afalo to Humph. Humph. How he likes being prevented (Afide. Sir F. Bev. No, no: You are an hour or two too early.

( Looking on his Watch.

1

y

1

n

CI

ce

Th

th

W

Bev. jun. You'll allow me, Sir, to think it too late to visit a beautiful, virtuous young Woman, in the pride and bloom of life, ready to give her felf to my arms: and to place her happiness or misery, for the future, in being agreeable or displeasing to me, is a-Call a Chair.

Sir J. Bev. No, no, no, dear Jack; this Sealand is a moody old Fellow: There's no dealing with some people, but by managing with indifference. We must leave to him the conduct of this day : It is the last of his commanding his Daughter. What will be and the who have

Bov. jun. Sir, he can't take it ill, that I am impatient l'emm of tuch l'effe t Sir 7. Bev. Pray let me govern in this matter: you can't cell how humor form old Fellows are: - There's no offering reason to some of 'em, especially when they are Rich -If my Son should see him, before I've brought old Sea-Tand into better temper, the Match would be impracticastiff ) formething that's imother a under all this raillerald Humph. Pray, Sir, let me beg you, to let Mr. Bevil go. See, whether he will or not, [ afide to Sir John ] -[ Then to Bev. ] Pray, Sir, command your felf; fince you fee my Mafter is politive, it is better you should not go.

Bev. jun. My Father commands me, as to the object of my affections; but I hope he will not, as to the warmth and heighth of them and I llow a tole 140 . wid . P. iii.

Sir J. Bev So! I must even leave things as I found them : And in the mean rime; at least, keep old Sealand out of his fight .- Well, Son, I'll go my, felf and take or-.oun in ders G

10

li-

n.

h.

le.

y.

b.

to

d

to

a-

4

2,

m

g

nt

1't

è.

ch

4-

2-

de.

pel

ou

of

th

nd

n-

CTS

ders in your affair You'll be in the way, I suppose, if I send to you—I'll leave your old Friend with you.—

Humphrey—don't let him stir, d'ye hear: Your Servant, your Servant.

(Ex. Sir John.

Humph. I have a fad time on't, Sir, between you and my Master---I see you are unwilling, and I know his violent inclinations for the Match---I must betray neither, and yet deceive you both, for your common good---Heav'n grant a goo. end of this matter: But there is a Lady, Sir, that gives your Father much trouble and sorrow---- You'll pardon me.

Bev. jun. Humphrey, I know thou art a Friend to both; and in that confidence, I dare tell thee.— That Lady—is a Woman of Henour and Virtue. You may affure your felf, Inever will tharry without my Father's confent: But give me leave to fay too, this declaration does not come up to a promife, that I will take whom foever he pleases.

Humph. Come Sir, I wholly understand you: You would engage my services to free you from this Woman, whom my Master intends you, to make way, in time, for the Woman you have really a mind to

Bev. jun. Honest Humphrey, you have always been an useful Friend to my Father, and my self; I beg you continue your good offices, and don't let us come to the necessity of a dispute; for if we should dispute, I must either part with more than life, or lose the best of Fathers.

this fecret, that so near concerns you, my life, my all should be engaged to serve you. This, Sir, I dare promise, that I am sure I will and can be secret: your trust, at worst, but leaves you where you were; and if I cannot serve you, I will at once be plain, and tell you so.

Bev. jun. That's all I ask. Thou halt made it now my interest to trust thee.—Be patient then, and hear the story of my heart.

Humpb. I am all attention, Sir.

Bev jun. You may remember, Humphrey, that in my last Travels, my Father grew uncasy at my making so long a slay at Toulen.

Humph. I remember it; he was apprehensive some Wo-

D

n

ti

E

ti

ne

m

th

Yo

th

on

the

man had laid hold of you.

Bev. jun. His fears were just; for there I first saw this Lady: She is of English birth: Her Father's name was Danvers, a younger Brother of an Ancient Family, and originally an eminent Merchant of Briftol; who, upon repeated misfortunes, was reduced to go privately to the Indies. In this retreat Providence again grew favourable to his industry, and, in fix years time, restored him to his former fortunes. On this he fent directions over , that his Wife and litle Family should follow him to the Indies. His Wife, impatient to obey fuch welcome orders, would not wait the leifure of a Convoy, but took the first occafion of a fingle Ship, and with her Husband's Sifter only, and this Daughter, then scarce seven years old, undertook the fatal Voyage: For here, poor Creature, fhe loft her Liberty, and Life; she, and her Family, with all they had, were unfortunately taken by a Privateer from Toulon. Being thus made a Prisoner, though, as such, not ill treated, yet the fright, the shock, and cruel disappointment, feiz'd, with fuch violence upon her unbealthy frame, the ficken'd, pined and died at Sea.

Humph. poor Soul! O the helpless Infant!

Bev. Her Sister yet surviv'd, and had the care of her: The Captain too proved to have humanity, and became a Father to her; for having himself married an English Woman, and being childless, he brought home into Toulon this her little Country-woman; presenting her, with all her dead Mother's moveables of value, to his Wife, to be educated as his own adopted Daughter.

Humph. Fortune here feem'd, again, to smile on her.

Bev. Only to make her frowns more terrible: For, in his height of Fortune, this Captain too, her Benefactor, unfortunately was kill'd at Sea, and dying intestate, his Estate fell wholly to an Advocate, his Brother, who coming soon to take possession, there sound (among (among his other Riches) this blooming Virgin, at his mercy.

Humph. He durst not, sure, abuse his power!

Bev. No wonder if his pamper'd blood was fired at the fight of her---in short, he lov'd: but, when all arts and gentle means had fail'd to move, he offer'd too his menaces in vain, denouncing vengeance on her cruelty; demanding her to account for all her maintenance from her childhood; seiz'd on her little Fortune, as his own inheritance, and was draging her by violence to Prison: when Providence at the instant interpos'd, and sent me, by miracle, to relieve her.

Humph. 'Twas Providence indeed: But pray. Sir, after all this trouble, how came this Lady at last to En:land?

his

ras nd

he

to his

his

lis

ıld

y.

ok

ner

ey

ill

it-

ıc,

er:

an ne

ng

to

hon

r, ic.

n-0-

nd

ng

Bev. The disappointed Advocate, finding she had so unexpected a support, on cooler thoughts, descended to a composition; which I, without her knowledge, secretly discharg'd.

Humph, That generous concealment made the obligation double.

Bev. Having thus obtain'd her Liberty, I prevail'd, not without some difficulty, to see her safe to England; where I no sooner arrived, but my Father, jealous of my being imprudently engaged, immediately proposed this other satal Match that hangs upon my quiet.

Humph. I find, Sir, you are irrecoverably fix'd upon this Lady.

Bev. As my vital life dwells in my heart — and yet you fee — what I do to please my Father: Walk in this pageantry of dress, this splendid covering of Sorrow—But, Humprey you have your lesson.

Humph. Now, Sir, I have but one material question___

Bev. Ask it freely.

Humph. Is it then, your own passion for this secret Lady, or hers for you, that gives you this aversion to the Match your Father has proposed you?

Ben

Bev. I shall appear, Humphrey, more romantick in my answer, than in all the rest of my Story: For tho' I doat on her to death, and have no little reason to believe the has the same thoughts for me; yet in all my acquaintance, and utmost privacies with her, I never once directly told her, that I loved.

Humph. How was it possible to avoid it?

Bev My tender obligations to my Father have laid so inviolable a restraint upon my conduct, that 'till I have his consent to speak, I am determin'd, on that subject, to be dumb for ever—

Humph. Well Sir, to your praise be it spoken, you are certainly the most unfashionable Lover in Great-Britain.

Enter Tom.

Tom. Sir, Mr. Myrtle's at the next door, and, if you are at leifure, will be glad to wait on you.

Bev. Whenever he pleases - hold , Tom ! did you receive no answer to my Letter?

Tam. Sir, I was defir'd to call again; for I was told, her Mother would not let her be out of her fight; but about an hour hence, Mrs. Lettice said, I should certainly have one.

Bev. Very well

Humph. Sir, I will take another opportunity: in the mean time, I only think it proper to tell you, that from a fecret I know, you may appear to your Father as forward as you please, to marry Lucinda, without the least hazard of its coming to a conclusion—Sir, your most obedient Servant.

Bev. Honest Humpbrey, continue but my Friend, in this exigence, and you shall always find me yours.

I long to hear how my Letter has succeeded with Lucinda but I think, it cannot fail; for, at worst, were it possible she could take it ill, her resentment of my indifference may as probably occasion a delay, as her taking it right.—

Poor Myrile, what terrors must be be in all this while?—

Since be knows she is offer'd to me, and refused to him; there is no conversing, or taking any measures, with him,

for

W

y

O

fa

for his own fervice—But I ought to bear with my Friend; and use him as one in Adversity;

All his disquiets by my own I prove, The greatest griet's perplexity in Love.

(Exeunt

A C T. I I.

SCENE I.

SCENE Continues.

Enter Bevil jun. and Tom,

TO M.

av dear Beril don't

tur divised When you acknow

CIR, Mr. Myrtle war ong of theil all war, wall

my

oat eve ac-

ver

lo ive ct,

are

are

ive

her

an ne.

the n a ard

ard

er-

in ph.

da

of-

ce

m;

m,

for

D Bew jan, Very well,—do you step again, and wait for an Answer to my Letter.

Myrte, Done you island Enter Myrtle, boy and I west

Bov. jun. Well Charles, why so much care in thy countenance? Is there any thing in this World deserves it? You, who used to be so gay, so open, so vacant!

Myre. I think we have of late chang'd complexions. You, who us'd to be much the graver Man, are now all air in your behaviour—But the cause of my concern, may, for ought I know, be the same object that gives you all this satisfaction. In a word, I am told that you are this very day (and your dress confirms me in it) to be married to Lucinda.

Bev. jun. You are not misinform'd. - Nay, put not on the terrors of a Rival, till you hear me out. I shall disoblige the best of Fathers, if I don't seem ready to marry Lucinda: And you know I have ever told you, you might make use of my secret resolution never to marry her, for your own service, as you please. But I am now driven to the extremity of immediately refusing, or complying, unless you help me to escape the Match.

Myre. Escape! Sir, neither her merit or her fortune are below your acceptance - Escaping, do you call it!

Bev. jun. Dear Sir, do you wish I should desire the Myrt. No—but such is my humorous and sickly state of mind, since it has been able to relish nothing but Lucinda, that the I must owe my happiness to your aversion to this Marriage, I can't bear to hear her spoken of with levity or unconcern.

Bev. jun. Pardon me, Sir; I shall transgress that way no more. She has understanding, Beauty, Shape, Complexion

Wit-

Myrt. Nay, dear Bevil, don't speak of her as if you lov'd her, neither.

Bev, jun. Why then, to give you ease at once, tho' I allow Lucinila to have good sense, Wit, Beauty and Virtue; I know another, in whom these qualities appear to me more amiable than in her.

Myrt. There you spoke like a reasonable and good-natur'd Friend. When you acknowledge her merit, and own your prepossession for another, at once, you gratify my tondness, and cure my jealousie.

Bev. jun. But all this while you take no notice, you have no apprehension of another Man, that has twice the Fortune of either of us,

Pedantick Coxcomb—For the Sot, with all these crude notions of diversithings, under the direction of great vacaity, and very little judgement, shews his strongest biass is Avarice; which is so predominant in him, that he will examine the limbs of his Mistress with the

cau-

11

F

d

b

h

8

W

to

Fo

caution of a Jockey, and pays no more compliment to her personal charms, than if she were a meer breeding Animal.

Bev. jun. Are you fure that is not affected? I have known some Women sooner set on fire by that fort of negligence, than by—

Myri. No, no, hang him, the Rogue has no art, it is pure fimple infolence and ftupidity.

ige

cin-

ake

our

the less

пе

the

ate

371-ion

ith

no

ion

y'd

J'I

ir-

to na-

WII

ny

VC

oral,

de

720

eft

nat

he

u-

Myst.

Bev jan. Yet, with all this, I don't take him for a Myrt. I own the Man is not a Natural; he has a very quick sense, the very slow understanding — He says indeed many things, that want only the circumstances of time and place to be very just and agreeable.

Bev. jun. Well, you may be fure of me; if you can disappoint him; but my Intelligence says, the Mother has actually sent for the Conveyancer to draw Articles for his Marriage with Lucinda; tho those for mine with her, are, by her Father's order, ready for signing but it seems she has not thought fit to consult either him or his Daughter in the matter.

Myre. Pshaw! A poor troublesome Woman—Neither Lucinda nor her Father will ever be brought to comply with it, — besides, I am sure Cimberton can make no Settlement upon her, without the concurrence of his great-Uncle Sir Geoffry in the west. and I men's

Bev. jun Well Sir, and I can tell you, that's the very point that is now laid before her Council; to know whether a firm Settlement can be made, without this Uncle's actual joyning in it. Now pray confider, Sir; when my affair with Lucinda comes, as it foon must, to an open rupture, how are you sure that Cimberton's Fortune may not then tempt her Father too; to hear his proposals?

Myer. There you are right indeed; that must be provided against—Do you know who are her Council?

Bey, jun. Yes, for your service I have found our that too they are Serjeant Bramble and Old Targer - by the way, they are neither of 'em known in the Family; now I was thinking why you might not put a couple of false Council upon her, to delay and confound matters a little—besides, it may probably let you into the bottom of her whole design against you.

C

Myrt. As how pray?

Bev jun. Why, can't you flip on a black Wig and a Gown, and be Old Bramble your felf?

Myrt. Ha! I don't diflike it __ but what shall I do for a Brother in the case?

Bev. jan. What think you of my Fellow, Tom? the Rogue's intelligent, and is a good Mimick; all his patt will be but to flutter heartily, for that's old Target's case—Nay, it would be an immoral thing to mock him, were it not that his impertinence is the occasion of its breaking out to that degree—the conduct of the scene will chiefly lye upon you.

C

if lù

pe

W

10

Myn. I like it of all things; if you'll fend Tom to my Chambers. I will give him full instruction: This will certainly give me occasion to raise difficulties, to puzzle, or confound her project for a while, at least 10 m

Bey jun. I'll warrant you fuccess: so far we are right then: And now, Charles, your apprention of my marrying her, is all you have to get over.

Myrr. Dear Bevil! tho' I know you are my Friend, yet when I abstract my felf from my own interest in the thing, I know no objection she can make to you,

or you to her, and therefore hope-

Bov. jun. Dear Myrtle, I am as much obliged to you for the cause of your suspicion, as I am offended at the effect; but be assured. I am taking measures for your certain security, and that all things with regard to me will end in your entire fatisfaction.

Myrt. Well, I'll promise you to be as easy and as considers as I can, the beamet but remember that I have more than life at stake on your fidelity is a

Bev. fee. Then depend upon it, you have no chance Myrt.

Myrt. Nay, no ceremony, you know I must be going. [Exit Myrt.

Bev. Well! this is another inflance of the perplexities which arise too, in faithful Friendship: We must often, in this life, go on in our good offices, even under the displeasure of those to whom we do them, in compassion to their weaknesses and Mistakes - But all this while poor Indiana is tortured with the doubt of me! she has no support or comfort, but in my fidelity, yet fees me daily press d to Marriage with another! How painful, in fuch a crisis, must be every hour the thinks on me? I'll let her fee, at least, my conduct to her is not chang'd: I'll take this opportunity to visit her; for the the religious Vow, I have made to my Father, refrains me from ever marrying without his approbation, yet that confines me not from feeing a virtuous Woman, that is the pure delight of my eyes, and the guittless joy of my heart : But the best condition of human life is but a gentler misery.

To hope for perfect happiness is vain,

And Love has ever its allays of pain.

Enter Ifabella, and Indiana in her own Lodgings:

Ifab. Yes - I fay 'tis artifice, dear Child; I fay to thee again and again, 'tis all skill and management.

Ind. Will you perfuade me there can be an ill delign, in supporting me in the condition of a Woman of Quality? attended, dress'd, and lodg'd like one; in myappearance abroad, and my Furniture at home, every way in the most sumptuous manner, and he that does it has an artisice, a delign in it?

Ifab. Yes, yes.

u

id

lo

he

tt 's

n,

ne

17

ill

e, re

id,

in

u,

to

at

or

to 29-

I

ng.

rt.

Ind. And all this without to much as explaining to Ifab. Ay, Ay, —the more for that — that keeps the Ttle to all you have, the more in him.

C 7

Ind.

Ind. The more in him! -He fcorns the thought-

Ilab. Then he-he-he-

Ind. Well, be not so eager — If he is an ill Man, let us look into his Stratagems. Here is another of them. [Shewing a Letter.] Here's two hundred and fifty Pound in Bank Notes, with these words, 'To pay for the Set of Dressing-plate, which will be brought home to-morrow. Why dear Aunt, now here's another piece of skill for you, which I own I cannot comprehend—and it is with a bleeding heart I hear you say any thing to the disadvantage of Mr. Bevil. When he is present, I look upon him as one to whom I owe my life, and the support of it; Then again, as the Man who loves me with sincerity and honour. When his eyes are cast another way, and I dare survey him, my heart is painfully divided between Shame and Love—Oh! cou'd I tell you:—

1/ab. Ah! You need not: I imagine all this for you.

Ind. This is my state of mind in his presence; and when he is absent, you are ever dinning my ears with notions of the Arts of Men; that his hidden bounty, his respectful conduct, his careful provision for me, after his preserving me from utmost misery, are certain signs he means nothing, but to make I know not what of me.

Ifab. Oh! You have a fweet opinion of him, truly.

Ind I have, when I am with him, ten thousand things, belides my Sex's natural decency and shame, to suppress my Heart, that yearns to thank, to praise, to say it loves him. I say, thus it is with me while I see him; and in his absence I am entertain'd with nothing but your endeavours to tear this amiable image from my heart; and, in its stead, to place a base dissembler, an artful Invader of my Happiness, my Innocence, my Honour.

liab. Ah poor Soul! has not his plot taken? don't you die for him? has not the way he has taken, been the most proper with you? Oh! ho! He has fease, and has judg'd the thing right.

.hui

Ind. Go on then, fince nothing can answer you: say what you will of him, Heigh! ho!

fabr

Is better to say so, as you are now, than as many others are. There are, among the Destroyers of Women, the Gentle, the Generous, the Mild, the Affable, the Humble, who all, soon after their success in their designs, turn to the contrary of those Characters. I will own to you, Mr. Bevil carries his hypocrific the best of any Man living; but still he is a Man, and therefore a Hypocrite. They have usurp'd an exemption from shame, for any baseness, any cruelty towards us. They embrace without Love; they make Vows, without conscience of obligation; they are partners, nay, Seducers to the crime, wherein they pretend to be less guilty.

Ind. That's truly observ'd. But what's all this to Bevil?

an,

m.

ınd

Sct

OT-

kill

is lif-

on

of ty

11 en

nd

0-ſ

is

he

s

3

n

n

f

[ Afide.

Isab. This it is to Bevil, and all Mankind. Trust not those, who will think the worse of you for your considence in them. Serpents, who lie in wait for Doves. Won't you be on your guard against those who would betray you? Won't you doubt those who would contemn you for believing em? Take it from me: Fair and natural dealing is to invite injuries, 'tis bleating to escape Wolves who would devour you! Such is the World! — and such (since the behaviour of one Man to my felf) have I believ'd all the rest of the Sex.

Ind. I will not doubt the truth of Bevil, I will not doubt it; He has not spoke it by an organ that is given to lying: His eyes are all that have ever told me that he was mine: I know his Virtue, I know his filial piety, and ought to trust his management with a Father, to whom he has uncommon obligations. What have I to be concern'd for? my Lesson is very short. If he takes me for ever, my purpose of life is only to please him. If he leaves me (which Heaven avert) I know he'll do it nobly; and I shall have nothing to do but to learn to die, after worse than death has happen'd to me.

Isab. Ay do, persist in your credulity! flatter your self that a Man of his Figure and Fortune will make himself the Jest of the Town, and marry a handsome Beggar for Love.

Ind. The Town! I must tell you, Madam, the Fools that laugh at Mr. Bevil, will but make themselves more ridiculous; his Actions are the result of thinking, and he has sense enough to make even Virtue sashionable.

Isab. O'my Conscience he has turn'd her head—Come, come; if he were the honest Fool you take him for, why has he kept you here these three weeks, without sending you to Bristol, in search of your Father, your Family, and your Relations?

Ind. I am convinc'd he still designs it; and that nothing keeps him here, but the necessity of not coming to a breach with his Father, in regard to the Match he has propos'd him: Beside, has he not writ to Bristol? and has not he advice that my Father has not been heard of there, almost these twenty years?

Usb. All sham, meer evasion; he is afraid, if he should carry you thither, your honest Relations may take you out of his hands, and so blow up all his wicked hopes at Ance.

Ind. Wicked hopes! did I ever give him any fuch?

List. Has he ever given you any honest ones? can you fay, in your Conscience, he has ever once offer'd to marry you?

ted. No! but by his behaviour I am convinc'd he will offer it, the moment 'tis in his power, or confident with his Honour, to make such a promise good to me.

Ifab. His Honour!

not make my life uneasie. by these ungrateful Jealoufies of one, to whom I am, and wish to be oblig'd: For from his Integrity alone, I have resolv'd to hope for happinels,

IJab. Nay, I have done my duty; if you won't Ce, your peril be it-

fed. Let it be-This is his hour of visiting me.

Mab:

1

V

le

n

le

0

b

n

fo

if

in k

V

O

G

fi

OF

Is

re

he

e, ıy

ig id

g

d

ft

d

4

at 11

e

.

Isb. Oh! to be fure, keep up your form; don't see him in a Bed-chamber: This is pure Prudence, when she is liable, where-ever he meets her; to be convey'd where'er he pleases.

Ind. All the rest of my life is but waiting till he comes: I live only when I'm withe him. [Exit.

note had almost as much Love for a Man, who poorly left me, to marry an Estate—And I am now, against my will, what they call an Old Maid—but I will not let the peevishness of that condition grow upon me—only keep up the suspicion of it, to prevent this Creature's being any other than a Virgin, except upon proper terms.

[Exit.

Re-enter Indiana Speaking to a Servant.

Ind. Defire Mr. Bevil to walk in—Defign! impossible! A base designing Mind could never think of what he hourly puts in practice—And yet, since the late rumour of his Marriage, he seems more reserved than formerly—he sends in too, before he sees me, to know it I am at leisure—such new respect may cover coldness in the heart—it certainly makes me thoughtful—I'll know the worst, at once; I'll lay such fair occasions in his way!, that it shall be impossible to avoid an Explanation—for these doubts are insupportable!—But see! he comes, and clears them all-

Enter Bevil.

Bau. Madam, your most obedient—I am afraid I broke in upon your rest last night—'twas very late before we parted; but 'twas your own fault. I never saw you in such agreeable humour.

Ind I am extremely glad we were both pleas'd; for I thought I never faw you better company.

Bey. Me, Madam ! you rally; I faid very little.

Ind. But, I am afraid, you heard me fay a great deal, and when a Woman is in the talking vein, the most agreeable thing a Man can do, you know, is to have patience, to hear her.

Bev. Then it's pity, Madam, you should ever be filent, that we might be always agreeable to one another.

Ind. If I had your talent, or power, to make my actions speak for me, I might indeed be filent; and yet pretend to something more than the agreeable.

Madam, tis that my understanding, from all your Sex, has mark'd you out, as the most deserving object of my esteem.

Ind Should I think I deserve this, 'were enough to make my vanity forfeit the very esteem you offer me.

Rev. How fo, Madam?

Ind. Because esteem is the result of Reason, and to deserve it from good sense the height of human glory: Nay, I had rather a Man of Honour should pay me that, than all the homage of a sincere and humble Love.

Bev. jun. You certainly distinguish right, Madam; Love often kindles from external merit only—

Ind. But esteem arises from a higher source, the merit of the Soul

Bev. jun. True-And great Souls only can deferve it, ( Bowing respectfully,

k

IF

fa

m

C

h

f

a

Ind. Now, I think, they are greater still, that can so charitably part with it

Bev. jun. Now, Madam, you make me vain, fince the utmost pride, and pleasure of my life is, that I esteem you—as I ought.

Ind. [ Afide. ] As he ought! still more perplexing! he neither faves, nor kills my hope

Bev. jun. But Madam, we grow grave methinks— Let's find some other subject—Pray how did you like the Opera last night?

Ind. Ind. First give me leave to thank you, for my Tickets.

Rev. jun. O! your Servant, Madam—But pray tell me, you now, who are never partial to the fashion, I fancy, must be the properest Judge of a mighty dispute among the Ladies, that is, whether Crispo or Griselda is the more agreable Entertainment.

Ind. With fubmission now, I cannot be a proper Judge of this question.

cat

to

be 10-ny

er,

of

gh

to

·y:

me

ble

VC

rit

lly,

fo

m

he

he

nd.

WHECK

Bev. jun. How fo, Madam?

Ind. Because I find I have a partiality for one of them.

Bev: jun. Pray which is that?

Ind. I do not know—there's fomething in that rural Cottage of Grifelds, her forlorn condition, her poverty, her folitude, her refignation, her innocent flumbers, and that lulling Dolce fogno that's fung over her; it had an effect upon me, that—in short I never was so well deceived, at any of them.

Bev: jun. Oh! Now then, I can account for the disputes Griselda, it seems, is the distress of an injur'd innocent Woman; Crispo. that only of a Man in the same condition; therefore the Men are mostly concern'd for Crispo, and, by a natural indulgence, both Sexes for Griselda.

Ind. So that judgment, you think, ought to be for one, tho' fancy and complaifance have got ground for the other. Well! I believe you will never give me leave to dispute with you on any subject; for I own, Crispo has its charms for me too: though in the main, all the pleasure the best Opera gives us, is but meer sensation.—Methinks it's pity the Mind can't have a little more share in the Entertainment.—The Musick's certainly sine; but, in my thoughts, there's none of your Composers come up to old Shakespear, and Otmay.

Bev jun. How, Madam! why if a Woman of your fense were to say this in the Drawing-Room.

Enter & Servant.

Serv. Sir, here's Signior Corbonelli says he waits your Commands, in the next room.

Bev. jun. A propos! You were faying yesterday, Madam, you had a mind to hear him — will you give him leave to entertain you now?

Ind. By all means : defire the Gentleman to walk in.

Ex. Servant.

t

h

ſ

n

f

b

ir

h

ti

h

m

th

H

m

is

th

th

W

by

Bev. jun. I fancy you will find fomething in this hand,

Ind. You are always finding ways, Mr. Bevil, to make life feem less tedious to me -

Enter Musick Master.

When the Gentleman pleases.

After a Sonata is play'd, Bevil waits on the Mafter to the Door, &c.

Bev. jun. You smile, Madam, to see me so complaisant to one, whom I pay for his visit: Now, I own, I think it is not enough barely to pay those, whose Talents are superior to our own (I mean such Talents, as would become our condition, if we had them.) Methinks we ought to do something more, than barely gratify them, for what they do at our command, only because their Fortune is below us.

approbation; for indeed, I cannot but think it the diffinguishing part of a Gentleman, to make his superiority of Fortune as easy to his interiors, as he can—Now once more to try him. [Aside.]—I was saying just now, I believed you would never let me dispute with you, and I dare say, it will always be so: However I must have your opinion upon a subject, which which created a debate between my Aunt and me, just before you came hither. She would needs have it, that no Man ever does any extraordinary kindness or service for a Woman, but for his own sake.

Bev. jun. Well Madam! Indeed I can't but be of her mind.

ur

n,

to

d,

ke

nt

ık

re

eat is

o£

10

u.

an ne

be

A,

ch

Ind. What, tho' he shou'd maintain, and support her, without demanding any thing of her, on her part?

Bev. jun. Why, Madam, is making an expence, in the service of a vauluable Woman (for such I must suppose her) though she should never do him any favour, nay, though she should never know who did her such service, such a mighty heroick business?

Ind Certainly! I should think he must be a Man of an uncommon mold.

Bev. jun. Dear Madam, why so? 'tis but, at best, a better taste in expence: To bestow upon one, whom he may think one of the ornaments of the whole Creation, to be conscious, that from his superfluity, an innocent, a virtuous spirit is supported above the temptations and forrows of life! That he sees satisfaction, health and gladness in her countenance while he enjoys the happiness of seeing her (as that I will suppose too, or he must be too abstracted, too insensible) I say, if he is allowed to delight in that prospect; alas! what mighty matter is there, in all this?

Ind. No mighty matter, in so disinterested a Friendfhip!

Bev. jun Disinterested! I can't think him so; your Hero, Madam, is no more, than what every Gentleman ought to be, and I believe very many are — He is only one, who takes more delight in reslections, than in sensations: He is more pleased with thinking, than eating; that's the utmost you can say of him — Why, Madam, a greater expence, than all this, Men by out upon an unnecessary Stable of Horses.

Ind. Can you be fincere, in what you fay?

Bev. jun. You may depend upon it, if you know any fuch Man, he does not love Dogs inordinately.

Ind. No, that he does not.

Bev. jun. Nor Cards, nor Dice.

Ind No.

Bev jun. Nor Bottle Companions.

Ind, No.

Bev, jun. Nor loofe Women.

Ind. No, I'm fure he does not.

Hero is not liable to any of these kind of demands, there's no such preheminence in this, as you imagine: Nay this way of expence you speak of, is what exalts and raises him, that has a taste for it: And, at the same time, his delight is incapable of satiety, disgust, or penitence.

Ind. But still I insist his having no private interest in the Action, makes it prodigious, almost incredible.

Bev. jun. Dear Madam. I never knew you more mistaken: Why, who can be more an Usurer, than he, who lays out his money in such valuable purchases? If Pleasure be worth purchasing, how great a pleasure is it to him, who has a true taste of life, to ease an aking heart, to see the humane countenance lighted up, into smiles of joy, on the receipt of a bit of Oar, which is superstuous, and otherwise useless in a Man's own pocket? What cou'd a Man do better with his cash? This is the effect of an humane disposition, where there is only a general tye of Nature, and common necessity. What then must it be, when we serve an object of merit, of admiration!

Ind. Well! the more you argue against it, the more I shall admire the generolity.

Bev. jun. Nay, nay— Then, Madam, 'tis time to fly, after a declaration, that my opinion strengthens my Adversary's argument—I had belt hasten to my appointment with Mr. Myrtle, and begone, while we are Friends,

and

h

t

£

fi

and-before things are brought to an extremity.

Exit carolefly

Enter Isabella

Isab. Well, Madam, what think you of him now pray?

Ind. I protest, I begin to fear he is wholly disinterested, in what he does for me. On my heart, he has no other view, but the meer pleasure of doing it, and has neither good or bad designs upon me.

Isab. Ah! dear Neice! don't be in fear of both! I'll warrant you, you will know time enough, that he is not indifferent.

d

s,

e:

ts

ne

ł,

ıt

li-

re

e,

: ?

re

an

p,

.

1'5

IIS.

1,

n+

VC

- I

to ıy

t-

S,

nd

Ind. You please me, when you tell me so: For, if he has any wishes towards me, I know he will not pursue them, but with Honour.

Isab. I wish, I were as confident of one, as t'other—I faw the respectful downcast of his eye, when you catche him gazing at you during the Musick: He, I warrant, was surprized, as if he had been taken stealing your Watch. O!

the undiffembled guilty look!

Ind. But did you observe any such thing, really? I thought he look'd most charmingly graceful! How engaging is Modesty, in a Man, when one knows there is a great Mind within—So tender a Consusion! and yet, in other respects. So much himself, so collected, so dauntless, so determin'd!

Ind Till what?

Ifab. Till I know whether Mr. Myrtle and Mr. Broil are really Friends, or Foes.—And that I will be convinced of, before I fleep: For you shall not be deceived.

Ind.

46. THE CONSCIOUS

Ind. I'm fure, I never shall, if your fears can guard me: In the mean time, I'll wrap my self up, in the integrity of my own heart, nor dare to doubt of his.

As conscious Honour all his actions steers, So conscious innocence dispels my tears.

[ Ex,

be

po

eq

yo

th

I

de

th

Or

to

th

A C T. I I I.

SCENE I.

SCENE Sealand's House.

Enter Tom meeting Phillis.

TO M.

What never feen me before—What a work have I to do now? She has feen some new Visitant, at their House, whose airs she has catch'd, and is resolv'd to practise them upon me. Numberless are the changes she'll dance thro', before she'll answer this plain question; videlien, Have you deliver'd my Master's Letter to your Lady? Nay, I know her too well, to ask an account of it in an ordinary way; I'll be in my airs as well as she. [Aside]—Well, Madam, as unhappy as you are, at present, pleased to make me, I would not, in the general, be any other than what I am, I would not be a bit wifer, a bit richer, a bit taller, a bit shorter, than I am at this instant. [Looking Bedfastly ar her.

that you were extremely fatisfied with your fweet

the fatified with, is my Fortune, and I am glad of my poverty: Perhaps, if I were rich, I should overlook the finest Woman in the World, that wants nothing but riches, to be thought so.

phil. How prettily was that faid? But, I'll have a great deal more, before I'll fay one word.

Tom I should, perhaps, have been stupidly above her, had I not been her equal; and by not being her equal, never had opportunity of being her Slave. I am my Master's Servant, for hire; I am my Mistress's, from choice; wou'd she but approve my passion.

Phil. I think, it's the first time I ever heard you speak of it, with any sense of the anguish, it you really do fuffer any.

ne:

ity

Ex.

in wi:

n

T

ir

0 es

1-

T

n

18

u.

4

d

-

7.

ıt

T

18

Tom Ah! Philis, can you doubt, after what you have feen?

phil. I know not what I have feen: nor what I have heard; but fince I'm at leifure, you may tell me, when you fell in Love with me; how you fell in Love with me; and what you have fuffer'd, or are ready to fuffer for me.

Tom. Oh! the unmerciful Jade! when I'm in haste about my Master's Letter—But, I must go thro' it, [Aside.]—Ah! too well I remember when, and how and on what occasion I was first surpriz'd. It was on the first of April, one thousand seven hundred and sisteen, I came into Mr. Sealand's service; I was then a Hobble-de-hoy, and you a pretty little tight Girl, a favourite Handmaid of the Housekeeper—At that time, we neither of us knew what was in us. I remember, I was order'd to get out of the window, one pair of stairs; to rub the Sashes clean,—the Person employ'd, on the innerside, was your charming self, whom I had never seen before.

Phil: I think, I remember the filly accident: What made ye, you Oaf, ready to fall down into the freet?

Tom. You know not, I warrant you You could not guess what surpriz'd me. You took no delight; when you immediately grew wanton, in your Conquest, and put your lips close, and breath'd upon the glass, and when my lips approach'd, a dirty cloth you rubb'd against my face, and hid your beauteous form; when I again drew near, you spit, and rubb'd, and smil'd at my undoing.

Phil. What filly thoughts you Men have !

Tom. We were Pyramus and Thisbe—but ten times harder was my Fate; Pyramus could peep only through a wall, I saw her, saw my Thisbe in all her beauty, but as much kept from her as if a hundred walls between, for there was more, there was her will against me. Would she but yet relent! —Oh, Phillis! Phillis! shorten my torment, and declare you pity me.

Phil. I believe it's very fufferable; the pain is not fo exquisite, but that you may bear it a little longer.

Tom. Oh! my charming Phillis if all depended on my Fair-one's will, I could with glory fuffer—But, dearest Creature, consider our miserable state.

Phil. How! Miserable!

Tom. We are miserable to be in Love, and under the command of others than those we love—with that generous Passion in the heart, to be sent to and fro on errands, call'd, check'd and rated on the meanest trisles. Oh, Phillis! you don't know how many China cups, and glasses, my Passion for you has made me break: You have broke my Fortune, as wellas my heart.

Phil. Well, Mr. Thomas, I cannot but own to you, that I believe, your Master writes and you speak the best of any Men in the World. Never was Woman so well pleas'd with a Letter; as my young Lady was with his, and this is an Answer to it.

[Gives him a Letter

Tom. This was well done, my Dearest; consider, we must strike out some pretty lively hood for our selves, by closing their affairs: It will be nothing for them to give us a little being of our own, some small Tenement, out of their large possessions: whatever they give us, 'twill be more than what they keep for themselves: one Acre, with Phillis, wou'd be worth a whole County without her.

Phil. O, could I but believe you!

Tom. If not the utterance, believe the touch of my Kiffes her. Lips.

Phil. There's no contradicting you; how closely you argue, Tom!

ht.

ft,

ind

2-n I

at ar-

all.

ich ere fhe

or-

fo

ny

reft

the

ne-

ds.

bil-

es,

ke

hat

ny

s'd

his

ter

we

by

ive

out

vill

be

Tom. And will closer, in due time. But I must hasten with this Letter, to hasten towards the possession of you. - Then, Phillis, confider, how I must be reveng'd, look to it, of all your skittishness, shy looks, and at best but coy compliances.

Phil. Oh! Tom, you grow wanton, and fenfual, as my Lady calls it; I must not endure it. Oh! Foh! you are a Man; an odious filthy male creature; you should behave, if you had a right sense, or were a Man of fense, like Mr. Cimberton, with distance, and indifference; or let me see some other becoming hard word, with feeming in-in-inadvertency, and not rush on one as if you were feizing a Prey, But Hush - the Ladie's are coming - Good Tom, don't kifs me above once, and be gone - Lard, we have been fooling and toying, and not consider'd the main business of our Masters and Mistresses.

Tam. Why, their business is to be fooling and toying, as soon as the Parchments are ready.

Phil Well remember'd-Parchments-my Lady, to my knowlegde, is preparing Writings between her Coxcomb Coufin Cimberton, and my Mistress; though my Master has an eye to the Parchments already prepar'd between your Master Mr. Bevil, and my Mistress; and I believe, my Mistress herself has fign'd and feal'd, in her heart, to Mr. Myrtle. - Did I not bid you kiss me but once, and be gone i but I know you won't be datisfy'd.

Tom. No, you smooth Creature, how should 1? your Lover and you were as [ Kissing her hand.

Phil. Well, fince you are so humble, or so cool, as to ravish my hand only, I'll take my leave of you like a great Lady, and you a Man of Quality.

They salute formally.

Tem. Pox of all this State

Offers to kifs her more closely.

Phil. No, pr'ythee, Tom, mind your business. We must follow that interest which will take; but endeayour at that which will be most for us, and we like most—O here's my young Mistress! [Tom taps ber neck behind, and kisses his singers.] Go, ye liquorish Fool: [Exit Tom.

Enter Lucinda.

Luc. Who was that you was hurrying away?

Phil One that I had no mind to part with.

Luc. Why did you turn him away then?

Phil. For your Ladyship's service, to carry your Ladyship's Letter to his Master: I could hardly get the Rogue away.

Luc. Why, has he so little love for his Master?

Phil. No; but he has so much love for his Mistress. Luc. But, I thought, I heard him kiss you. Why do you fuffer that?

phil. Why, Madam, we vulgar take it to be a fign of Love; we Servants, we poor People, that have nothing but our persons to bestow, or treat for, are forced to deal, and bargain by way of sample; and therefore, as we have no Parchments, or Wax necessary in our agreements, we squeeze with our hands, and seal with our lips, to ratisfe Vows and Promises.

Luc But can't you trust one another, without fuch earnest down?

Gentry, to come together without Deeds executed.

Luc. Theut art a pert merry Huffy.

Phil. I wish, Madam, your Lover and you were as Lappy, as Tom and your Servants are.

Ine You grow impertinent.

phil. I have done, Madam; and I won't ask you, what you intend to do with Mr. Myrde, What your Father will do with Mr. Bevil. nor what you all, especially my Lady, mean by admitting Mr Comberson as particularly here, as if he were married to you already; nay, you are married actually as far as People of Quality are.

Luc. How's that?

ly.

ly.

Ve

a-

ke

ser

ol:

m.

0

our

the

ofs.

do

ign

no-

are

and cef-

ds,

es.

uch

you

as as

Phil. You have different beds in the fame house.

the Pfhaw! I have a very great value for Mr. Bewit, but have absolutely put an end to his pretentions, in the Letter I gave you for him: But, my Father,
in his heart, still has a mind to him, were it not for this Woman they talk of; and, I am apt to imagine he is married to her, or never designs to marry at all.

Phil. Then Mr. Mystle-

Luc. He had my Parents leave to apply to me, and by that has wen me, and my affections: who is to have this body of mine, without em, it feems, is nothing to me; my Mother fays, it's indecent for me to let my thoughts stray about the person of my Hufband: nay, she says, a Maid, rigidly virtuous, tho she may have been where her Lover was a thousand times, should not have made observations enough, to know him from another Man, when she sees him in a third place.

Phil. That is more than the fewerity of a Nun; for not to fee, when one may, is hardly possible; not to fee when one can't, is very easy: at this rate, Madam, there are a great many whom you have not feen, who -

Luc. Marama lays, the first time you see your Hinband should be at that instant he is made so; when your Father, with the help of the Minister, gives you to him; then you are to see him, then you are to observe and take notice of him; because then you are to obe; him.

D z

Phil. But does not my Lady remember, you are to love, as well as obey?

Luc. To love is a Passion, 'tisa desire, and we must have no desires. Oh! I cannot endure the reslection! With what insensibility on my part, with what more than patience, have I been expos'd, and offer'd to some aukward Booby or other, in every County of Great Britain?

Phil. Indeed, Madam, I wonder, I never heard you weak of it before, with this indignation.

Luc. Every corner of the land has presented me whith a wealthy Coxcomb. As fast as one Treaty has gone off, another has come on, till my Name and Person have been the tittle-tattle of the whole Town: What is this World come to! No shame lett! To be barter'd for, like the beasts of the fields, and that, in such an instance, as coming together, to an intire familiarity, and union of Soul and Body; Oh! and this, without being so much as well-wishers to each other, but for encrease of Fortune.

Phil. But, Madam, all these vexations will end very soon, in one for all. Mr. Cimberton is your Mother's Kinsman, and three hundred years an older Gentleman than any Lover you ever had; for which reason, with that of his prodigious large Estate, she is resolved on him, and has sent to consult the Lawyers accordingly. Nay, has (whether you know it or no) been in treaty with Sir Geoffry, who, to join in the settlement, has accepted of a Sum to do it, and is every moment expected in Town for that purpose.

Lue. How do you get all this intelligence?

Phil, By an Art I have, I thank my Stars, beyond all the Waiting-maids in Great - Britain; the Art of lifthing, Madam, for your Ladyship's Service.

Luc. I shall soon know as much as you do; leave me, leave me, Phillis, be gone: Here, here, I'll turn you out, My Mother sa, s I must not converse withm y Servants; tho' I must converse with no one else, [Ext

Phil-

to

uft

n!

ore

to eat

ou

ith

one

on hat r'd

an y,

nut

or

ry

r's

an

th

on ly.

ity

as

e-rd

of

C, u

y

1-

Phillis.] How unhappy are we, who are born to great Fortunes! No one looks at us, with indifference, or acts towards us on the foot of plain-dealing: yet, by all I have been heretofore offer'd to, or treated for, I have been us'd with the most agreeable of all abuses, Flattery; but now, by this slegmatick Fool, I am us'd as nothing, or a meer Thing: He, forsooth! is too learned to have any regard to desires, and, I know not what the learned Oat calls Sentiments of love and passion — Here he comes with my Mother — It's much if he looks at me; or if he does, takes no more notice of me, than of any other moveable in the room.

Enter Mrs. Sealand, and Mr. Cimberton.

Mrs. Seal. How do I admire this noble, this learned tafte of yours, and the worthy regard you have to our own ancient and honourable House, in consulting a means, to keep the blood as pure, and as regularly descended as may be.

Cim. Why, really Madam, the young Women of this Age are treated with discourses of such a tendency, and their imaginations so bewilder'd in sless and blood, that a Man of reason can't talk to be understood: They have no ideas of happiness, but what are more gross than the gratification of hunger and thirst.

Luc. With how much reflection he is a Coxcomb?

Cim. And in truth, Madam, I have consider'd it, as a most brutal custom, that Persons, of the first Character in the World, should go as ordinarily, and with as little shame, to bed, as to dinner with one another. They proceed to the propagation of the Species, as openly, as to the preservation of the Individual.

Lue. She that willingly goes to-bed to thee; must have no shame, I'm sure.

Mrs. Seal. O Coufin Cimberton! Coufin Cimberton !

how abstracted, how refin'd, is your sense of things!
But, indeed, it is too true, there is nothing so ordinary as to say, in the best govern'd Families, my Matter and Lady are gone to-bed; one does not know but it might have been said of one's self

Hiding her Pace with her Fan.

Cim. Lyeurgus, Madam, inftituted otherwife; among the Lacedemonians, the whole Fernale World was pregnant, but none, but the Mothers themselves, knew by whom; their meetings were secret, and the amorous congress always by stealth; and no such professed doings between the Sexes, as are tolerated among us, under the audacious word, Marriage

Mrs. Seal Oh! had I liv'd in those days, and been a Matron of Sparts, one might, with less indecency, have had ten Children, according to that modest institution, than one, under the confusion of our modern,

barefac'd manner. 2721 (findow out box a more to what the whole ecremony, and here I fland a melancholy proof of it.

Mrs. Seel. We will talk then of business. That Girl walking about the room there is to be your Wife. She has, I confess, no ideas, no featiments, that speakher born of a thinking Mother.

Cimb I have observed her; her lively look, free air,

and difengag'd countenance speak her very-

Luc. Very, what? was sound was all was Cinb. If you please, Madam - to set her a little that Way

Mrs. Seal. Lucinda, fay nothing to him, you are not a Match for him; when you are married, you may freak to such a Husband, when you're spoken to. But, I am disposing of you, above your self, every way.

Cimb. Madam, you cannot but observe the inconveniences I expose my self to, in hopes that your Ladyship will be the consort of my better part: As for the young

young Woman, she is rather an impediment, than a help, to a Man of Letters and speculation. Madam, there is no reflection, no Philosophy, can, at all times, subdue the sensitive life, but the animal shall sometimes carry away the Man. Ha! ay, the vermilion of her lips.

Luc. Pray, don't talk of the thus.

Cimb. The pretty enough pant of her bolom.

Luc. Sir, Madam, don't you hear him?

Cimb. Her forward cheft.

Luc. Intollerable! watchas at amay I had stand

!!

i-

.

ut

w.

g

C.

W

ns

gs.

er

.

en

y,

1-

n,

o'

ly

10 irl

he

er

r,

at

re

ou

to.

ry

re-

yhe Cimb. High health.

Luc. The grave, easy impudence of him!

Cimb Proud heart.

Luc. Stupid Coxcomb?

Cint. I fay, Madam, her impatience, while we are looking at her, throws out all attractions—her arms—her neck—what a fpring in her step!

Luc. Don't you run me over thus, you fhange unaccountable!

Cimb. What an elasticity in her veins and arteries?

Luc. I have no veins, no arteries.

Mrs. Seal. Oh, Child, hear him, he talks finely, he's a Scholar, he knows what you have.

Cimb The speaking invitation of her shape, the gathering of her seif up, and the indignation you see in the pretty little thing __ now, I am considering her, on this occasion, but as one that is to be pregnant.

Inc, The familiar, learned, unfeationable Puppy

Cimb. And pregnant undoubtedly the will be yearly. I fear, I than't, for many years, have discretion enough to give her one fallow featon.

Luc. Moniter! there's no bearing it. The hideous Sot! There's no enduring it, to be thus furvey'd like a Steed at fale.

Cimb. At fale! she's very illiterate __ But she's very well well-limb'd too; turn her in; I fee what the is:

[Exit Lucinda in a rage.

m

T

f

h

Mrs. Seal. Go., you Creature, I am asham'd of you. Cimb. No harm done you know, Madam, the better fort of People, as I observ'd to you, treat by their Lawyers of Weddings [adjusting himself at the Glass] and the Woman in the bargain, like the Manfion house in the sale of the Estate, is thrown in, and what that is, whether good or bad, is not at all consider'd.

Mrs. Seal. I grant it, and therefore make no demand for her Youth, and Beauty, and every other accomplishment, as the common World think 'em, because she is not polite.

Cimb. Madam, I know, your exalted understanding, abstracted, as it is, from vulgar prejudices, will not be offended, when I declare to you, I marry to have an Heir to my Estate, and not to beget a Colony, or a Plantation: This young Woman's Beauty, and Constitution, will demand provision for a tenth Child at least.

Mrs. Seal. With all that wit, and learning, how confiderate! What an Oeconomist! [aside.]—Sir, I cannot make her any other than she is; or say she is much better than the other young Women of this Age. or sit for much, besides being a Mother; but I have given directions for the Marriage-Settlements, and Sir Geoffrey Comberton's Council is to meet ours here, at this hour, concerning his joyning in the Deed, which when executed, makes you capable of settling what is due to Lucinda's Fortune: Her self, as I told you, I say nothing of.

and I must depend upon my own Resection, and Philosophy, not to to overstock my Family.

Mrs. Seal- I cannot help her, cousin Cimberton; but the is, for ought I see, as well as the Daughter of any body else.

Cimb.

rences upon what is in our till my Chent is in I own.

Cimb. That is very true, Madam.

20.

u.

the

by

the

mnd

on-

de-

ac-

be-

ng,

ve

10

n-

at

W

is his

t I

nd e, ng

al-

ut

ny

6.

Enter a Servant, who whi/pers Mrs. Scaland.

Mrs Seal. The Lawyers are come, and now we are to hear what they have resolv'd as to the point whether it's necessary that Sir Geoffry should join in the Settlement, as being what they call in the Remainder But; good Cousin, you must have patience with em. These Lawyers, I am told, are of a different kind, one is what they call a Chamber-Council, the other a Pleader. The Conveyancer is slow, from an impersection in his speech, and therefore shun'd the Bar, but extremely passionate, and impatient of contradiction: The other is as warm as he; but has a tongue so voluble, and a head so conceited, he will suffer no bedy to speak but himself.

Gimb. You mean old Serjeant Target, and Counfellor Bramble? I have heard of 'em.

Mrs. Seal. The fame: shew in the Gentlemen.

Exit Servant.

Re-enter Servant, introducing Myrtle and Tom, dif-

Mrs. Seal. Gentlemen, this is the Party concern'd, Mr. Cimberton; and I hope you have confider'd of the matter.

Tar. Yes, Madam, we have agreed that it must be by Indent — dent — dent — dent —

Bram. Yes, Madam, M. Serjeant and my felf have agreed, as he is pleas'd to inform you, that it must be an Indenture tripartite, and tripartite let it be, for Sir Geoffry must needs be a Party; old Cimberton, in the Year 1619, says in that ancient Roll, in Mr. Serjeant's hands, as recourse thereto being had, will more at large appear—

Tar. Yes, and by the Deeds in your hands, it apapears, —that D 5 Bram.

Bram. Mr. Serjeant, I begiof you to make no inferences upon what is in our custody; but speak to the titles in your own Deeds __ I shall not show that Deed till my Client is in Town.

0

1

b

1

Gimb. You know best your own methods.

Mrs. Soul. The single Question is, whether the Intail is fuch, that my Coulin Sir Gooffry is necessary in this affair ?

Bram- Yes, as to the Lordship of Tretripht, but not as to the Messinge of Gringribber.

Tort I fay that Gr gr _ that Gr gr _ Grimprib. ber Grimeribber is in us. That is to fay the remainder thereof, as well as that of Tr _ trulet.

Bram You go upon the Beed of Sir Calpb, made in the middle of the last Century, precedent to that in which old Gimberton made over the Remainder, and made it pass to the Heirs general, by which your Client comes in ; and I question whether the Remainder even of Tretriplet is in him - But we are willing to wave that, and give him a valuable confideration. But we shall not purchase what is in us for ever, as Grimgribber is, at the rate as we guard against the confingent of Mr. Cimberton having no Son - Then we know Sir Geoffey is the first of the collateral Male Line in this Family _ Yet _

Ter. Sir, Gr _ gr _ ber is_

Bram. I apprehend you very well, and your Argument might be of force, and we would be inclined to hear that in all its parts _ But; Sir , I fee very plain what you are going into - I tell you, it is as probable a contingent that Sir Geoff y may die before Mr. Oimberrens as that he may outlive bim. at od as . .....

To Sir, we are not ripe for that yet, but I must for more mentale a clary; old common to val

Bram. Sir, I allow you the whole extent of that Arpument; but that will go no farther than as to the Claimants under old Cimberton, __ I am of cpinion that according to the inflauction of Sir Ralsh, he could not dock LIPERST

dock the Entail, and then create a new Estate for the Heirs general both annual of compo

Tar. Sir, I have not patience to be told that, when

Gr gr - box - vex on , where is not all the

ofc-

the

ced

In-

in 1000 not 16-der

ade

hat

er,

our

in-

me

on. as

the

nen

lale

gu-

to

ain

ble

muft

Ar-

the

hat

not

ock

Bram. I will allow it you, Mr. Serjeant; but there must be the word Heirs for ever, to make such an the Tro-Teder where the Estate as you pretend.

Cimb I must be impartial, the you are Council for my fide of the question were it not that you are fo good as to allow him what he has not faid, I should think it very hard you should answer him without hearing him __ But Gentlemen, I believe you have both consider'd this matter, and are firm in your different opinions: 'Twere better therefore you proceeded according to the particular fense of each of you, and gave your thoughts diffinctly in writing . And do you fee, Sirs, pray let me have a copy of what you fay in English.

Bram. Why, what is all we have been saying? In English! Oh! but I forgot my felf, you're a Wit-But however, to please you, Sir, you shall have it, in as plain terms, as the Law will admit of.

Cimb, But I would have it, Sir, without delay.

Bram. That, Sir, the Law will not admit of: the Courts are fitting at Westminster, and I am this moment obligid to be at every one of them; and 'twould be wrong if I should not be in the Hall to attend one of 'em at least, the rest would take it ill else - There. fore, I must leave what I have said to Mr. Scrieant's confideration, and I will digest his Arguments on my part, and you shall hear from me again, Sir.

Exis Bramble.

Tar. Agreed, agreed.

Cimb. Mr Bramble is very quick _ He parted a little abruptly

Tar. He could not bear my Argument, I pincht him to the quick about that Gr -gr ber.

Mrs. Seal. I faw that, for he durit not fo much as hear hear you __ I shall send to you, Mr. Serjeant, as soon as Sir Geoffry comes to Town, and then I hope all may be adjusted.

4 3 198 T

Section 1

Tar. I shall be at my Chambers, at my usual hours.

[Exit,

ab

L

fu M

qu

ca

ho

ye

be pl

at

I

th

m

in

he P

to

ft

tidi

cimb. Madam, if you please, I'll now attend you to the Tea-Table, where I shall hear from your Ladyship, reason, and good-sense, after all this Law and gibberish.

Mrs. Seal. 'Tis a wonderful thing, Sir, that Men of professions do not study to talk the substance of what they have to say, in the language of the rest of the World: Sure, they'd find their account in it.

of your good sense; but with the generality 'twould never do: The Vulgar would have no respect for Truth and Knowledge, if they were exposed to naked view.

Truth is too simple, of all art bereav'd:
Since the World will—why let it be deceiv'd. [Ex.

ACT. IV.

SCENE I.

SCENE Bevil Junior's Lodgings.

Bevil jun with a Letter in his hand, follow'd by Tom.

U PON my life, Sir, I know nothing of the Umatter: I never open'd my lips to Mr. Myrtle, about about any thing of your Honour's Letter to Madam Lucinda.

Bev. What's the Fool in such a fright for? I don't suppose you did: What I would know is, whether Mr. Myrtle shew'd any suspicion, or ask'd you any questions, to lead you to say casually, that you had carry'd any such Letter, for me this morning.

Tom. Why, Sir, if he did ask my any questions,

how could I help it?

foon e all

Exit,

ou to ady-

en of what ople

for ked

Ex.

the

tle,

Bev. I don't fay you could, Oaf! I am not questioning

you, but him: What did he fay to you?

Tom. Why, Sir, when I came to his Chambers, to be dress'd for the Lawyer's part, your Honour was pleas'd to put me upon, he ask'd me, if I had been at Mr. Sealand's this morning?—So I told him, Sir, I often went thither—because, Sir, if I had not said that, he might have thought, there was something more, in my going now, than at another time.

Bev. Very well! — The Fellow's caution, I find, has given him this jealoufy. [afide.] Did he ask you no other questions?

Tom. Yes, Sir—now I remember, as we came away in the Hackney Coach, from Mr, Sealand's, Tom, fays he, as I came in to your Master, this morning, he bad you go for an Answer to a Letter he had sent. Pray did you bring him any? says he—Ah! says I, Sir, your Honour is pleas'd to joke with me, you have a mind to know whether I can keep a Secret, or no?

Bev. And fo, by shewing him you could, you told him you had one?

Tom. Sir- [confus'd.

Bev. What mean actions does Jealousy make a Man stoop to? How poorly has he us'dart, with a Servary to make him betray his own Master? Well! and when did he give you this Letter for me?

Tom. Sir, he writ it, before he pull'd off his Lawyer's

Gown, at his own Chambers.

Bew.

her

and 211

m

on pu fer

to

fig

di

70 fe

f

á

V

brought him my Answer to it?

Tom. He look'd a little out of humour, Sir, and foid , It was very well.

Beu. I knew he would be grave upon't, - wait without.

Tom. Humbl 'gad, I don't like this; I am afraid we are all in the wrong box here. - [Exit Tom.

Bev. I put on a ferenity, while my Fellow was prefent: But I have never been more thoroughly diffurb'd; This hot Man! to write me a Challenge, on supposed artificial dealing, when I profess'd my felf his Friend! I can live contented without Glory; but I cannot suffer shame. What's to be done? But first, let me consider Lucinda's Letter again.

[Reads.

SIR,

I Hope it is confifent with the Laws a Woman ought to impase upon her self, to acknowledge, that your manner of declining a Treaty of Marriage, in our Family, and desiring the Refusal may come from me, has sumething more engaging in it, than the Courtship of him, who, I fear, will fall to my Lot; except your Friend exerts himself, for our common safety, and happiness: I have reason for desiring Mr. Myrtle may not know of this Letter, till breasten, and am your most obliged humble Servant,

Lucinda Scaland.

Well, but the Postscript. [Reads.]
I ment, upon ferond thoughts, hide any thing from you.
But my reason for concealing this is, that Mr. Myrile
but a judious in his temper, which gives me some terrors;
but my esteem for him inclines me to hope that only an ill essent, which sometimes accompanies a tender Love; and what may be our do, by a coresub and unblameable conduct.

Thus has this Lady made me her Friend and Confident, and put her felf, in a kind, under my Protection: I cannot tell him immediately the purport of her her Letter, except I could cure him of the violent and untractable passion of Jealousy, and so serve him, and her, by disobeying her, in the article of seenecy, more than I should by complying with her directions — But then this Duelling, which Custom has imposed upon every Man, who would live with Reputation and Honour in the World: —How must I preserve my self from imputations; there? He'll, storsooth, call it, or think it sear, if I explain without sighting—But his Letter—Pil read it again—

SIR.

you

and wait

raid

em.

Pre-

b'd; ofed and!

iffer

LH-

ads.

t to mer and

ning

erts

ave

his able

nd.

ads.

ou.

275;

an

at.

nte-

of

her

Y OU have us'd me basely, incorresponding, and carrying on a Treaty, where you told me you were indifferent: I have chang'd my Sword, since I saw you which advertisment I thought proper to send you against the next meeting, between you, and the injur'd Charles Myrtle.

Enter Tom.

Tom. Mr. Myrele, Sir: would your Henour please to

Bev. Why you stupid Creature! Let M. Myrsle wait at my Lodgings! Shew him up. [Exis Tom.] well! I am resolved upon my carriage to him—He is in love, and in every circumstance of life a little distrustful, which I must allow for—but here he is.

Enter Tom introducing Myrtle.

Sir, I am extremely oblig'd to you for this Honour.

—But, Sir, you, with your very discerning face, leave the Room [Exit Tom.] Well, Mr. Myrele, your commands with me?

Myrt. The time, the place, our long acquaintance, and many other circumstances, which affect me on this occasion, oblige me, without farther ceremony, or con-have, acknowledge the receipt of my 'letter, but also comply with the request in it. I must have farther notice taken of my Messege than these half lines. — I have yours, - I then be at home.

Bro. Sir, I own, I have received a Letter from you, in a very unufual style; But as I design every thing, in this matter, shall be your own action, your own seeking, I shall understand nothing, but what you are pleas'd to confirm, face to face, and I have already torgot the contents of your Epistle.

Myrt. This cool manner is very agreeable to the abuse you have already made of my simplicity and frankness; and I see your moderation tends to your own advantage, and not mine; to your own safety, not confideration of your Friend.

Bev. My own fafety, Mr. Myrsle! Myrsle. Your own fafety, Mr. Bevil.

Brv. Look you, Mr. Myrtle, there's no disguising that I understand what you would be at—But, Sir, you know, I have often dared to disapprove of the Decisions a Tyrant Custom has introduc'd, to the breach of all Laws, both Divine and Human.

Myre Mr. Bevil, Mr. Bevil, it would be a good first Principle, in those who have so tender a Conscience that way, to have as much abhorrence of doing injuries,

25 -

Bevil. As what?

Myrt. As Fear of answering for 'em.

Bev. As fear of answering for 'em! But that apprehension is just or blameable, according to the object of that fear,—I have often told you in considence of heart, I abhorr'd the daring to offend the Author of life, and rushing into his presence.—I say, by the very same act, to commit the crime against him, and immediately to urge on to his Tribunal.

Myre. Mr. Bevil, I must tell you, this coolness, this gravity, this shew of Conscience, shall never the t

0

ti

fe ar

ri

ar

ye

Yo

me of my Mistress. You have, indeed, the best excuse for life, the hopes of possessing Lucinda: But confider, Sir, I have as much reason to be weary of it. if I am to lose her; and my first attempt to recover her, shall be to let her see the dauntless Man, who is to be her Guardian and Protector.

Bev. Sir, shew me but the least glimpse of Argument. that I am authoriz'd, by my own hand, to vindicate any lawless infult of this nature, and I will shew thee -to chastize thee -hardly deserves the name of Courage - flight, inconfiderate Man! - There is, Mr. Myrtle, no fuch terror in quick anger; and you shall, you know not why, be cool, as you have, you know not why, been warm. The same and same and base ready

alfo

otice

have

you,

ing.

own

you

eady

ic a-

and

OUT

not ing

ir,

the

the bod

ace

es,

C-

ct

ce

or

he

d

.

t

ne

Myrt. Is the Woman one loves, so little an occasion of anger? You perhaps, who know not what it is to love, who have your ready, your commodious, your foreign Trinket, for you loose hours; and from your fortune, your specious outward carriage, and other lucky circumstances, as easie a way to the posfession of a Woman of Honour; you know nothing of what it is to be alarm'd, to be distracted, with anxiety and terror of loing more than life: Your Marriage, happy Man! goes on like common business. and in the interim, you have your rambling Captive, your Indian Princess, for your foft moments of dalliance, your convenient, your ready Indiana

Bev. You have touch'd me beyond the patience of a Man; and I'm excusable, in the guard of Innocence (or from the infirmity of human-nature, which can bear no more) to accept your invitation, and observe your Letter-Sir, I'll attend you.

Ager. With what a juperiority has be turn'd the injury on one, as the AggresamoT round to fear, I have been too be traditioned - A Treaty in our Family ! is not that Tom. Did you call, Sir? I thought you did: I heard you speak aloud. W - shades and said and said and tlemen - what d'ye mean? I am but a Servant, or Bev. Call a Coach.

Bev. Yes, go call a Coach.

[ Along Pouse, walking sullenly by each other. [ Aside ] Shall I (though provok'd to the uttermost) recover my self at the entrance of a third person, and that my Servant too, and not have respect enough to all I have ever been receiving from infancy, the obligation to the best of Fathers, to an unhappy Virgin too, whose life depends on mine. [Shutting the door.

[To Myrtle ] I have, thank Heaven, had time to recollect my felf, and shall not, for sear of what such a rash Man as you think of me, keep longer unexplain'd the salse appearances, under which your infirmity of temper makes you suffers when, perhaps, too much regard to a salse Point of Honour, makes me prolong that suffering.

Myre. I am fure, Mr. Bevil cannot doubt, but I had nather have fatisfaction from his innocence, than his fword.

Myre. Consider, you kept your temper your self no longer than till I spoke to the disadvantage of her you lov'd.

the most exquisite distress, even the you had succeeded in the dispute. I know you so well, that I am sure, to have found this Letter about a Man you had kill'd, would have been worse than Death to your self—Read it—When he is thoroughly mortify'd, and Shame has got the better of Jealousie, when he has seen himself throughly, he will deserve to be assisted towards obtaining Lucinda.

Myre. With what a superiority has he turn'd the injury on me, as the Aggressor? I begin to fear, I have been too far transported—A Treaty in our Family! is not that saying too much? I shall relapse—But, I find (on the Postscript) something like Tealousse—with what face can I see my Benefactor? my Advocate? whom I have treated

ted like a Betrayer. Oh ! Bevil, with what words fhall I-

Bev. There needs none; to convince, is much more than to conquer. Eurer Ser, long Bevil Myrt. But can you.

110

m,

er.

re-

hat

11 ao

ofc

or.

to

ch

X-

fir-

00

me

nad

his

no

OU

mo ded

ave ave

he

ter

vill

iry

cen

hat

the

can

cated

Bey. You have o'erpaid the inquietude you gave me, in the change I see in you towards me: Alas! what Machines are we! thy face is alter'd to that of another Man; to that of my Companion, my Friend.

Myrt. That I could be fuch a precipitant Wretch!

Bev. Pray, no more.

Mytt: Let me reflect how many Friends have died, by the hands of Friends, for want of temper; and you must give me leave to 'fay again and again how much I am beholden to that superior Spirit you have subdu'd me with --- what had become of one of us, or perhaps both, had you been as weak I was, and as incapable of reason?

Bev. I congratulate to us both the escape from our felves, and hope the memory of it will make us dearer

Friends than ever.

Myrt. Dear Bevil, your friendly conduct has convinc'd me that there is nothing manly, but what is conducted by Reason, and agreeable to the practice of Virtue and Justice: And yet, how many have been facrific'd to that Idol, the unreasonable Opinion of Men! Nay, they are so ridiculous in it, that they often use their swords against each other, with diffembled anger, and real fear.

Betray'd by Honour, and compell'd by Shame, They hazard Being, to preferve a Name: Nor dare enquire into the dread millake, sully sales 'Till plung'd in fad Eternity they wake. ( Exernit: to put into your Bull of rates, on this occasion - yet, but,

I have made no of consto year Son's Family - The Lis

in Titte Sir, I can't help faying the what might in-

Morals that I doubt. we

SCENE St. Jame's Park.

Enter Sir John Bevil, and Mr. Scaland.

Sir J. Bev. Give me leave, however, Mr. Sealand, as we are upon a Treaty for uniting our Families, to mention only the business of an ancient House---Genealogy and Descent are to be of some consideration, in an affair of this fort-

Mr. Seal. Genealogy, and Descent! — Sir, there has been in our Family a very large one. There was Galfrid the Father of Edward, the Father of Ptolomey, the Father of Crassus, the Father of Earl Richard, the Father of Henry the Marquis, the Father of Duke John.—

Sis 7. Boo. What, do you rave, Mr. Sealand? all thefe great Names in your Family?

Mr. Seal. These? yes, Sir-I have heard my Father name em all, and more.

Sir 7. Bev. Ay, Sir? --- and did he fay they were all in your Family?

Mr. Seal. Yes, Sir, he kept 'em all---he was the great's est Cocker in England---he said, Duke John won him many Battles, and never loft one.

my laying any stress upon Descent--but I must tell you Sir, I never knew any one, but he that wanted that advantage, turn it into ridicule.

Mr. Seal. And I never knew any one, who had many better advantages, put that into his Account-2-But, Sir John, value your felf as you please upon your ancient House, I am to talk freely of every thing, you are pleas'd to put into your Bill of rates, on this occasion—yet, Sir, I have made no objections to your Son's Family—'Tis his Morals that I doubt.

Sir J. Bev Sir, I can't help faying, that what might injure a Citizen's credit, may be no stain to a Gentleman's Honour.

Mr. Mr. Seal. Sir John, the Honour of a Gentleman is liable to be tainted, by as small a matter as the Credit of a Trader. We are talking of a Marriage, and in such a case, the Father of a young Woman will not think it an addition to the Honour, or Credit of her Lover—that he is a Keeper—

Sir J. Bev. Mr. Sealand, don't take upon you, to spoil

my Son's Marriage, with any Woman else

Mr. Seal. Sir John, let him apply to any Woman elfe, and have as many Mistresses as he pleases-

Sir J. Bev. My Son, Sir, is a discreet and sober Gentleman—

Mr Seal. Sir, I never faw a Man that wench'd foberly and differently, that ever left it off—the decency observ'd in the practice, hides, even from the Sinner, the iniquity of it. They pursue it, not that their appetites hurry 'em away; but, I warrant you, because, 'tis their opinion, they may do it.

Sir J. Bev. Were what you suspect a truth-do you design to keep your Daughter a Virgin, 'till you find a Man unblemish'd that way?

Mr. Seal. Sir, as much a Cit as you take me for—I know the Town, and the World—and give me leave to fay, that we Merchants are a species of Gentry, that have grown into the World this last Century, and are as honourable, and almost as useful, as you landed Folks, that have always thought your selves so much above us. For your trading, for sooth! is extended no farther, than a load of hay, or a fat Ox—You are pleasant People, indeed; because you are generally bred up to be lazy, therefore, I warrant you, Industry is dishonourable.

sir 7. Bev. Be not offended , Sir; let us go back to our point.

25

n-

nd

his

has rid

CT

ry

·ſc

er

in

it's

m

at

ÓU

d+

ny

Sir

nt

ď

۲,

us

0-

7.

Mr. Seal. Oh! not at all offended—but I don't love to leave any part of the account unclos'd—look you, Sir John, comparisons are odious, and more particularly so, on occasions of this kind, when we are projecting races, that are to be made out of both sides of the Comparisons.

E 3

Sir J. Bov. But, my Son, Sir, is, in the eye of the

W

World, a Gentleman of Merit.

Mr Seal. I own to you, I think him fo. - But, Sir John; I am a Man exercis'd, and experienc'd in chances, and difafters: I loft, in my earlier years, a very fine Wife, and with her a poor little Infant; this makes me, perhaps, over cautious, to preferve the fecond bounty of Providence to me, and be as careful, as I can, of this child -you'll pardon me, my poor Girl, Sir, is as valuable to me, as your boafted Son, to you

Sir J. Bev. Why, that's one very good reason, Mr.

Sealand, why I wish my Son had her.

Mr. Seal There is nothing, but this strange Lady here, this Incognita, that can be objected to him-here and there a Man falls in love with an artful Creature, and gives up all the motives of life, to that one Passion.

Sir J. Bev. A Man of my Son's understanding, cannot be suppos'd to be one of them.

Mr. Seal. Very wife Men have been fo enflav'd; and, when a Man marries, with one of them upon his hands, whether mov'd from the demand of the World, or flighter reasons; such a Husband soils with his Wife for a month perhaps - then Good b'w'y Madam - the Show's over-ah! John Dryden points out such a Husband to a hair, where he fays.

, And while abroad fo prodigal the Dolt is.

" Poor Spouse at home as ragged as a Colt is.

Now in plain terms, Sir, I shall not care to have my poor Girl turn'd a grazing, and that must be the case. when -

Sir 3. Bev. But pray consider, Sir, my Son-

Mr. Seal Look you Sir, I'll make the matter fhort: This unknown Lady, as I told you, is all the obje-Ction I have to him: But, one way or other, he is, or has been, certainly engag'd to her -I am therefore refolved, this very afternoon, to vife her; Now from her her behaviour, or appearance, I shall soon be let into, what I may fear, or hope for.

Sir J. Bev. Sir, I am very confident, there can be nothing enquir'd into, relating to my Son, that will not, upon being understood, turn to hisadvantage.

Mr. Seal. I hope that, as fincerely as you believe it—Sir John Bevil, when I am satisfied, in this great point, if your Son's conduct answers the character you give him, I shall wish your Alliance more than that of any Gentleman in Great Britain, and so your Servant.

sir J. Bev. He is gone, in a way but barely civil; but his great wealth, and the merit of his only Child, the Heiress of it, are not to be lost for a little previshments.

Enter Humphrey.

Oh! Humphrey, you are come in a feafonable minute; I want to talk to thee, and to tell thee, that my head and heart are on the Rack, about my Son.

Humph. Sir, you may trust his discretion, I am sure you may.

the

Sir

ces,

ife,

ps,

nce

u'll

as

Mr.

rc,

ere

ųp.

ot

d,

s,

h-

2

1'5

2

sir J. Bev. Why, I do believe I may, and yet I'm in a thousand fears, when I lay this vast Wealth before me: when I consider his prepossessions, either generous to a folly, in an honourable Love, or abandon'd, past redemption, in a vicious one; and, from the one or the other, his insensibility to the fairest prospect, towards doubling our Estate: a Father who knows how useful Wealth is, and how necessary, even to those who despise it, I say a Father, Humphrey, a Father cannot bear it.

Humph. Be not transported, Sir; you will grow incapable of taking any resolution, in your perplexity.

Sir J. Bev. Yet, as angry as I am with him, I would not have him surprized in any thing ___ This mercantile rough Man may go grosly into the examination nation of this matter, and talk to the Gentlewoman

Humph. No, I hope, not in an abrupt manner.

sir J. Bev. No, I hope not! Why, don't thou know any thing of her, or of him, or of any thing of it, or all of it?

Humph. My dear Master, I know so much, that I told him this very day, you had reason to be secretly out of humour about her.

sir 7. Bev. Did you go fo far? Well, what faid he to that?

Humph His words were, looking upon me stedfastly: Humphrey, says he, That Woman is a Woman of Honour.

Sir J. Bev. How! Do you think he is married to her, or designes to marry her?

Humph. I can fay nothing to the latter — But he fays, he can marry no one without your confent, while you are living.

Sir J. Bev. It he faid so much, I know he icorns to break his word with me.

Humph. I am fure of that.

Sir J. Bev. You are sure of that—Well! that's some comfort — Then I have nothing to do but to see the bottom of this matter, during this present russe — Oh, Humphrey—

Humph You are not ill. I hope, Sir.

Sir J. Bev. Yes a Mon is very ill, that's in a very ill humour: To be a Father, is to be in care for one, whom you oftner disoblige, than please, by that very care—Oh! that Sons could know the duty to a Father, before they themselves are Fathers—But, perhaps, you'll say now, that I am one of the happiest Fathers in the World; but, I assure you, that of the very happiest is not a condition to be envied.

felf, but your particular fense of it — You are overfond; nay, give me leave to say, you are unjustly ap-

pre-

DT

di

G

m

lil

W

A

1

h

d

prehensive from your fondness: My Master Bevil never disoblig'd you, and he will, I know he will, do every thing you ought to expect.

Sir J. Bev. He won't take all this money with this Girl—For ought I know, he will, for footh, have so much moderation, as to think he ought not to force his liking for any consideration.

Humph. He is to marry her, not you; he is to live with her, not you, Sir,

nan

ow it,

t I

tly

he

d.

nan

to

he ns

nc

s,

Sir J. Bev. I know not what to think: I know, nothing can be more miserable than to be in this doubt — Follow me; I must come to some resolution.

Exeunt.

SCENE, Bevil junior's Lodgings.

Enter Tom and Phillis

Tom. Well. Madam, if you must speak with Mr. Myrele, you shall; he is now with my Master in the Library.

Phil. But you must leave me alone win him, for he can't make me a Present, nor I so handsomly take any thing from him, before you; it would not be decent.

Tom. It will be very decent, indeed, for me to retire, and leave my Miltress with another Man.

Phil. He is a Gentleman, and will treat one pro-

Tom. I believe so—but, however, I won't be far off, and therefore will venture to trust you: I'll call him to you.

[Exist Tom.]

Phil. What a deal of pother, and sputter here is between my Mistress, and Mr. Myrele, from meer punctilio! I could any hour of the day get her to her Lover, and would do it—But she, for sooth, will allow no Plot to get him; but, if he can come to her, I know the would be glad of it: I must therefore do her an acceptable violence, and furprize her into his Arms. I am fure I go by the best rule imaginable: If the were my Maid, I thould think her the best Servant in the world for doing so by me.

E 5

know

Enter Myrtle and Tom.

Oh Sir! You and Mr. Bevil are fine Gentlemen, to let a Lady remain under fuch difficulties as my poor Miltress, and no attempt to fet her at liberty, or releafe her from the danger of being instantly married to Cimberton.

Myrt. Tom has been telling ___ But what is to be done?

Phil. What is to be done — when a Man can't come at his Mistress! Why, can't you fire our House, or the next House to us, to make us run out and you take us?

Myrt. How, Mrs. Phillis -

Phil. Ay ... let me fee that Rogue deny to fire a House, make a Riot, or any other little thing, when there were no other way to come at me.

Tom. I am oblig'd to you, Madam.

Phil. Why don't we hear every day of people's hanging themselves for Love, and won't they venture the hazard of being hang'd for Love? __ Oh! were I a Man.

Myrt. What manly thing would you have me undertake; according to your Ladyship's notion of a Man?

Phil. Only be at once, what, one time or other,

you may be, wish to be, or must be

Myrt. Dear Girl, talk plainly to me, and confider, I, in my condition, can't be in very good humouryou fay, to be at once what I must be.

Phil. Ay, ay, - I mean no more than to be an old Man; I faw you do it very well at the Masquemon!

rade:

rade: In a word, old Sir Geoffry Cimberton is every hour expected in Town, to join in the Deeds and Settlements for marrying Mr. Cimberton - He is half blind, halt lame, half deaf half dumb; tho, as to his passions and desires, he is as warm and ridiculous as when in the heat of youth -

Tom. Come to the business, and don't keep the Gentleman in suspence for the pleasure of being courted, as you ferve me.

do his

le:

eft

let

or

re-

to be

ne

ſe.

ou

ere

III+

r ,

er,

an 10-

e:

237755

Phil. I faw you at the Masquerade act such a one to perfection; go, and put on that very habit, and come to our House as Sir Geoffry. There is not one there, but my felf, knows his person; I was born in the Parish where he is Lord of the Mannor. I have feen him often and often at Church in the Country. Do not hesitate, but come thither; they will think you bring a certain security against Mr, Myrtle, and you bring Mr. Myrtle. Leave the rest to me; I leave this with you, and expect _ They don't, I told you, know you, they think you out of Town, which you had as good be for ever, if you lose this opportunity I must be gone; I know I am wantedat home.

Myrt. My dear Phillis! [Catches and kiffes ber, and gives her Money.

Phil O Fie I my kiffes are not my own; you have committed violence; but I'll carry 'em to the right Owner. [Tom kiffes her] Come, fee me down flairs. [to Tom] and leave the Lover to think of his last game Exeunt Tom and Phillis. for the Prize.

Myrt. I think I will instantly attempt this wild expedient - The extravagance of it will make me less fuspected, and it will give me opportunity to affert my own right to Lucinda, without whom I cannot live: But I am so mortify'd at this conduct of mine, toward poor Bevil; He must think meanly of me I know not how to reassume my felf, and be in spirit enough, for such an Adventure as this - Yet I must that pure of the World

76 THE CONSCIOUS"

attempt it, if it be only to be near Lucinda under her present perplexities; and sure

The next delight to Transport, with the Fair, Is to relieve her, in her hours of care.

Exit:

de

fo

do

n

ACT V.

SCENE I.

S C E N E, Sealand's House.

Enter Phillis, with lights, before Myrtle, difguis'd like old Sir Geoffry, supported by Mrs. Scaland, Lucinda, and Cimberton,

Mrs Sealand

You excuse me a moment, while I give my necessary orders for your accommodation?

Ex .Mrs .Seal.

Myrt. I have not feen you, Cousin Cimberton, since you were ten years old; and as it is incumbent on you, to keep up our Name and Family, I shall, upon very reasonable terms, join with you, in a Settlement to that purpose. Tho' I must tell you. Cousin this is the first Merchant that has married into our House.

Luc. Deuce on 'em! am I a Merchant, because my Father is?

Myre But is he directly a Trader, at this time?

Cimb. There's no hiding the difgrace, Sir; hetrades to all parts of the World.

Myre.

Myre. We never had one of our Family before, who descended from persons that did any thing.

Cimb. Sir, fince it is a Girl that they have, I am; for the Honour of my Family, willing to take it in again; and to fink her into our Name, and no harm done.

Myrt. 'Tis prudently, and generously resolv'd - Is this the young thing?

Cimb. Yes, Sir.

Phil. Good Madam, don't be out of humour, but let them run to the utmost of their extravagance — Hear them out.

Myrt. Can't I fee her nearer ! My eyes are but weak.

her

xit:

7. 8

198

ike

la,

ill

y

al.

CC

n

n

-

n

ır

y e.

S

.

Phil. Beside, I am sure the unkle has something worth your notice. I'll take care to get off the young one, and leave you to observe what may be wrought out of the old one, for your good.

Cimb. Madam, this old Gentleman, your Great Unkle, desires to be introduced to you, and to see you nearer! - Approach, Sir.

Myrt. By your leave, young Lady — [Puts on Spedacles.] Cousin Cimberton! She has exactly that fort of neck, and bosom, for which my Sister Gertrud: was so much admired, in the year sixty one, before the French dresses sirst discovered any thing in Women, below the chin.

Tho' I cannot but be diverted, at the extravagance of their humours, equally unsuitable to their age — Chin, quotha — I don't believe my passionate Lover there knows whether I have one or not Ha! ha!

Myrt Madam, I would not willingly offend, but I have a better glass ____ [Pulls out a long one.

Enter Phillis to Cimberton.

Phil. Sir, my Lady desires to shew the apartment to you, that she intends for Sir Gooffry. Cimb.

gazed, and funned your felf in the beauties of my Spoule there, I will wait on you again. [Ex. Cimb. and Phill.

Myr. Were it not, Madam, that I might be troublefome, there is fomething of importance, the we are alone, which I would say more safe from being heard.

Inc. There is fomething, in this old Fellow methinks, that raises my curiosity.

Myr. To be free, Madam, I as heartily contemn this Kinfman of mine, as you do, and am forry to fee so much Beauty and Merit devoted, by your Parents, to so insensible a Possessor.

Luc. Surprizing! — I hope then, Sir, you will not contribute to the wrong you are so generous as to pity, whatever may be the interest of your Family.

Myr. This hand of mine shall never be employ'd, to sign any thing, against your good and happiness.

Luc. I am forry, Sir, it is not in my power to make you proper acknowledgments; but there is a Gentleman in the World, whose gratitude will, I am sure, be worthy of the favour.

Myrt. All the thanks I defire, Madam, are in your power to give.

Campia

Lus. Name them, and command them.

Myr. Only, Madam, that the first time you are ajone with your Lover, you will, with open arms, receive him.

Luc. As willingly as his heart could wish it.

Myr. Thus then he claims your promise! O Lucin-

Luc. O! a Cheat! a Cheat! a Cheat!

Myr. Hush! 'tis I, tis I, your Lover, Myrtle him-

Luc. O bless me! what a rashness, and folly to surprize me so—But hush—my MotherU

th [

y

l

Inter Mrs. Sealand, Cimberton, and Phillis.

Mrs. Seal. How now! what's the matter?

Luc. O Madam! as foon as you left the Room, my Uncle fell into a fudden fit, and and fo I cry'd out for help, to support him, and conduct him to his Chamber

Mrs. Seal. That was kindly done! Alas! how do you find your felf?

itly

ule ill.

ou-

WC

ing

ks,

nn

to Pa-

ot

ty,

ke

an

be ur

a-

,

7-

1-

-

Myr Never was taken, in so odd a way in my life pray lead me! Oh! I was talking here (pray carry me) to my Cousin Cimberton's young Lady

Mrs. Seal [ Afide ] My Cousin Cimberton's young Lady! How zealous he is, even in his extremity, for the Match! a right Cimberton.

[Cimberton and Lucinda lead him, as one in pain, &c:

Cymb. Pox! Uncle, you will pull my ear off.

Luc. Pray Uncle, you will squeeze me to death.

Mrs. Seal. No matter, no matter he knows not what he does. Come, Sir, shall I help you out?

Myrt. By no means; I'll trouble no body, but my young Cousins here. [They lead him off.

Phil. But pray, Madam, does your Ladyship intend that Mr. Cimberton shall really marry my young Mistress at last? I don't think he likes her.

Mrs. Seal. That's not material! Men of his Speculation are above defires but be it as it may; now I have given old Sir Geoffry the trouble of coming up to fign and feal, with what countenance can I be off?

Phil. As well a with twenty others, Madam; It is the glory and honour of a great Fortune, to live in contenual Treaties, and still to break off: it looks great, Madam.

Mrs. Seal. True, Phillis yet to return our blood again into the Cimberton's, is an Honour not to be rejected but were not you faying, that Sir John Bevil's Creature Humphrey has been with Mr. Sealand?

Phil. Yes, Madam; I overheard them agree; that

Mr. Sealand should go himself, and visit this unknown

Lady that Mr. Bevil is so great with; and it he sound nothing there to fright him, that Mr. Bevil should still marry my young Mistress.

Daughter, as well as his: I'll follow him this inftant, and take the whole Family along with me: The difputed power of disposing of my own Daughter shall be at an end end this very night — I'll live no longer in anxiety for a little Hussey, that hurts my appearance, wherever I carry her; and, for whose sake, I feem to be at all regarded, and that in the best of my days.

Phil. Indeed, Madam, if the were married, your Ladyship might very will be taken for for M. Scaland's Daughter.

Mrs. Seal. Nay, when the Chit has not been with me, I have heard the Men say as much — I'll no longer cut off the greatest pleasure of a Woman's life, (the shining in Assemblies) by her forward anticipation of the respect that's due to her Superior — she shall down to Cimberton-Hall — she shall—she shall.

Phil. I hope, Madam, I shall stay with your Ladyship.

Mrs. Seal. Thou shalt, Phillis, and I'll place thee then more about me—But order Chairs immediately—I'll be gone this minute.

[Exeunt.

S C E N E, Charing-Cross.

Enter Mr. Sealand, and Humpbrey.

Mr. Seal. I am very glad, Mr. Humphrey, that you agree with me, that it is for our common good, I should look thoroughly into this matter.

Humph.

fire

fpe

tho

ma

fur

Book

II

fo :

felf

tis

WCI

tion

A carr

tho'

again

Lady

knov

bit,

her.

Boy

is at

I hav

zeady

Bo

Ty,

B

Humph. I am, indeed, of that opinion; for there is no artifice, nothing concealed in our Family, which ought in justice to be known. I need not defire you, Sir, to treat the Lady with care and respect.

the I design to be a little abrupt, and come into the matter at once, to see how she will bear, upon a money whether the is within or no, if discinguil

d?

at

m

nd

ill

y

t,

f-

Ille

er

-

I

y

r

s

h

0

n

11

-

e

Humph. That's the door, Sir, I wish you success—[While Humphrey. speaks, Scaland consults his Table-Book] I am less concern'd what happens there, because I hear Mr. Myrtle is well lodg'd, as old Sir Geoffry, so I am willing to let this Gentleman employ himself here, to give them time at home: for I am sure, 'tis necessary for the quiet of our Family, Lucinda were disposed of, out of it, since Mr. Bevil's inclination is so much otherwise engaged.

[Exis.

Mr. Seal. I think this is the door — [Knocks] I'll carry this matter with an air of Authority, to enquire, tho' I make an errand, to begin discourse. [Knocks again, and Enter a Foot-Boy. So young Man! is your Lady within ?.

Boy. Alack, Sir! I am but a Country Boy—I dont know, whether she is, or noa: but an you'll stay a bit, I'll goa, and ask the Gentlewoman that's with her.

Mr. Seel. Why, Sirrah, tho' you are are a Country Boy, you can fee, can't you? you know whether the

is at home, when you fee her, don't you?

Boy. Nay, nay, I'm not fuch a Country Lad neither, Master, to think the's at home, because I see her: I have been in Town but a month, and I lost one Place already, for believing my own eyes.

Mr. seal. Why, Sirrah! have you learnt to lie al-

zeady?

Boy. Ah! Master! things that are Lies in the Country, are not Lies at London—I begin to know my bufiness

12 THE CONSCIOUS

finels a little better than to - but an you please to walk in, I'll call a Gentlewoman to you, that can tell you for certain the can make bold to ask my Lady her

TOVER

Mr Seal. Oh! then the is within, I find, the you

dere nor lay for the state state and as on the lab

iny. Nay, nay! that's neither here, nor there: what's matter whether she is within or no, if she has not a mind to fee any body? 2000 51

Mr. Seal I can't tell, Sirrah, whether you are arch. or impley but however get me a direct answer, and here's a Shilling for you.

Boy Will you please to walk in, I'll see what I can do for vou.of . sence at sent drant ov

Mr. Seal. I fee you will be fit for your bufiness, in time, Child. But I expect to meet with nothing but extraordinaries, in fuch a Houle

Boy. Such a House! Sir, you han't seen it yet: Pray

walk init . Thousand him

Mr. Seal. Sir, I'll wait upon you. [Exeunt.

sobother the is, or coa; but an you lay a

a Fast Bay. So young Man I is your

SCENE, Indiana's House.

naw Jali manow I Znter Ifabella.

1sab. What anxiety do I feel for this poor Creature! What will be the end of her? Such a languishing unreferv'd paffion, for a Man, that at last must certainly leave, or ruin her! and perhaps both! then the aggravation of the diffress is, that she does not believe he will-Not but I must own, if they are both what the would feem, they are made for one another, as much as Adam and Eve were, for there is no other, of their kind, but themselves.

uy, are not Lies at London- tegin to know my bu-Enter So Spe

cvc kn

for me

furp kno

A in t Tho

of F

effec Girl I fin

'twa facti A turb:

wha

will 1/ aing

I ha

Enter Boy.

So Daniel! what news with you?

lk

ou'

CI

ON

at s ton

ch,

ind

can

in but ray

unt.

urc!

ning

inly

gra-

he

what

her,

21:07

Will the St.

Boy. Madam, there's a Gentleman below would speak with my Lady.

1fab. Sirrah! don't you know Mr. Bevil yet?

Boy. Madam, 'tis not the Gentleman who come every day, and asks for you, and won't go in till he knows whether you are with her or no-

1sab. Ha! that's a particular I did not know before: Well! be it who it will, let him come up to me. [Ex. Boy; and re-enters with Mr. Sealand.

Ifabella looks amaz'd?

Mr. Se al. Madam, I can't blame your being a little furpriz'd, to see a perfect Stranger make a visit and—Isab. I am indeed surpriz'd!—I see he does not know me.

Mr. Seal. you are very prettily lodg'd here, Madam; in troth you feem to have every thing in plenty—a Thousand a Year, I warrant you, upon this pretty nest of Rooms, and the dainty One within them.

Isab. [Apart.] Twenty Years, it seems, have less effect in the alteration of a Man of thirty, than of a Girl of fourteen—he's almost still the same; but alas! I find, by other Men, as well as himself, I am not what I was—As soon as he spoke I was convinced 'twas he—How shall I contain my surprize and satisfaction! he must not know me yet.

Mr. Seal. Madam, I hope I don't give you any difturbance; But there is a young Lady here, with whom I have a particular business to discourse, and I hope she will admit me to that favour.

Ifab. Why, Sir, have you had any notice concerdaing her? I wonder who could give it you.

F 2

Mr. Seal. That, Madam, is fit only to be communicated to herself.

Isab. Well, Sir! you shall see her:—I find he knows nothing yet, nor shall from me: I am resolv'd, I will observe this interlude, this sport of Nature, and of Fortune—You shall see her presently, Sir; For now I am as a Mother, and will trust her with you.

Exit.

Mr. Seal. As a Mother! right; that's the old phrase, for one of those commode Ladies, who lend out beauty, for hire, to young Gentlemen that have pressing occasions. But here comes the precious Lady herself. In troth a very sightly Woman—

Enter Indiana.

Ind. I am told, Sir, you have some affair that requires your speaking with me-

Mr. Seal. Yes, Madam: There came to my hands a Bill drawn by Mr. Bevil, which is payable to-mortow; and he, in the intercourse of business, sent it to me, who have cash of his, and desired me to send a Servant with it; but I have made bold to bring you the money my self.

Ind. Sir! was that necessary?

Mr. Seal. No, Madam; but, to be free with you, the Fame of your beauty, and the regard, which Mr. Bevil is a little too well known to have for you, excited my curiofity.

Ind. Too well known to have for me! Your fober appearance, Sir, which my Friend describ'd, made me expect no rudeness, or absurdity, at least—Who's there? Sir, if you pay the Money to a Servant, 'twill be as well.

Mr. Seal. Pray, Madam, be not offended; I came hither on an innocent, nay a virtuous design; and, if you will have patience to hear me, it maybe as useful to you, as you are in a Friendship with Mr. Bevil, 25 to my only Daughter, whom I was this day disposing of.

Ind. You make me hope, Sir, I have mistaken you; I am composed again; be free, say on what I am afraid to hear.

Mr. Seal. I fear'd, indeed, an unwarranted Passion here, but I did not think it was in abuse of so worthy an Object, so accomplish'd a Lady, as your sense and mien bespeak — but the Youth of our Age care not what Merit and Virtue they bring to shame, so they gratify—

Ind. Sir — you are going into very great errors—but, as you are pleas'd to fay you see something in me that has chang'd, at least, the colour of your suspicions; so has your Appearance alter'd mine, and made me earnestly attentive to what has any way concern'd you, to enquire into my affairs, and Character.

Mr. Seal. How fensibly! with what an air she talks Ind. Good Sir, be seated — and tell me tenderly — keep all your suspicions concerning me alive, that you may in a proper and prepared way, acquaint me why the care of your Daughter obliges a Person of your seeming worth and Fortune, to be thus inquisitive about a wretched, helpless, friendless — [weeping.] But I beg your pardon — tho' I am an Orphan, your Child is not; and your concern for her, it seems, has brought you hither — I'll be composed — pray go on, Sir.

Mr. Seal. How could Mr. Bevil be fuch a Monster, to injure fuch a Woman?

Ind. No, Sir ___ you wrong him __ he has not injur'd me __ my support is from his bounty.

Mr. Seal. Bounty! when Gluttons give high prices for delicates, they are prodigious bountiful.

Ind. Still, still you will persist in that error — But my own fears tell me all—You are the Gentleman, I suppose, for whose happy Daughter he is design'd a Husband, by his good Father; and he has, perhaps,

F

connorat it e to ring

ands

re-

ni.

2W

vill

of

WO

zit.

afe.

ity,

cca-

oth

Mr.

ober

ho's

, if ifeful

te

confented to the overture: He was here this morning. dress'd beyond his usual plainness, nay most sumptuously and he is to be, perhaps, this night a Bridegroom.

Mr. Soul I own he was intended fuch: But, Madam, on your account, I have determin'd to defer my Daughter's Marriage, till I am fatisfied from your own mouth, of what nature are the obligations you are under to him.

Ind. His actions, Sir, his eyes have only made me think, he defign'd to make me the Partner of his heart. The goodness and gentleness of his demeanour made me mifinterpret all ___ 'Twas my own Hope, my own Passion, that deluded me _ he never made one amorous advance to me_His large heart, and bestowing hand, have only helpt the Miserable: Nor know I why, but from his mere delight in Virtue, that I have been his care, the object on which to indulge and please himself, with pouring Favours.

Mr. Seal Madam , I know not why it is, but I, as well as you, am methinks afraid of entring into the matter I came about ; but 'tis the fame thing, as if we had talk'd never fo diffinctly - he ne'er fhall have a Daughter of mine.

-20035

Ind. If you fay this from what you think of me, you wrong your felf and him _ Let not me, miferable the I may be, do injury to my Benefactor _ No. Sir, my treatment ought rather to reconcile you to his Virtues -If to beltow, without a prospect of return; if to delight in supporting, what might, perhaps, be thought an object of Delire, with no other view than to be her Guard against those who would not be so difinterested; if these actions, Sir, can in a careful Parent's eye commend him to a Daughter, give yours, Sir, give her to my honest, generous Bevil __ What have I to do, but figh, and weep, to rave, run wild, a Lunatick in chains, or hid in darkness, mutter in distracted starts, and broken accents, my strange, strange Story I book and ed Ibuse to Postages

Mr. Seal. Take comfort, Madam.

Ind. All my comfort must be to expostulate in madness, to relieve with frenzy my despair; and shricking to demand of Fate, why was I born to such variety of Sorrows?

Mr. Seal. If I have been the least occasion __

Ind. No —'twas Heaven's high will, I should be such — to be plunder'd in my cradle! tos'd on the Seas! and even there, an Infant Captive! to lose my Mother, hear but of my Father — To be adopted! lose my Adopter! then plung'd again in worse calamities!

Mr. Seal. An Infant Captive!

y

n

T

S

r

C

I

¢

Ind. Yet then! to find the most charming of Mankind, once more to set me free, (from what I thought the last distress) to load me with his services, his bounties, and his favours; to support my very life, in a way, that stole, at the same time, my very Soul it self from me-

Mr. Seal. And has young Bevil been this worthy

Ind. Yet then again, this very Man to take another! without leaving me the right, the pretence of easing my fond Heart with tears! For oh! I can't reproach him; though the same hand that rais'd me to this height, now throws me down the precipice.

Mr. Seal. Dear Lady! O yet one moment's parience:
my Heart grows full with your affliction: But yet,

there's fomething in your story that

Ind. My Portion here is birrernels, and forrow.

Mr Seal Do not think fo; Pray answer me: Does

Bevil know your Name, and Family?

Ind. Alas! too well! O, could I be any other thing, than what I am—I'll tear away all traces of my former felf, my little Ornaments, the remains of my first state, the hints of what I ought to have been—

[In her disorder she throws away a Braceles which Scaland takes up. and looks earnestly on it.

Mr. Seal. Ha! what's this? my eyes are not deceiv'd! It is, it is the fame! the very Bracelet which I bequeath'd my Wife, at our last mournful parting.

my Fancy carry me? What means this unfelt motion at my heart? And yet again my Fortune but deludes me; for if I err not, Sir, your Name is Sealand: But my lost Father's Name was—

Mr. Seal. Danvers! was it not?

Ind. What new amazement! That is indeed my Family.

Mr. Seal. Know then, when my Misfortunes drove me to the Indies, for resions two tedious now to mention, I chang'd my Name of Danvers into Sealand.

Enter Isabella.

Isb. If yet there wants an explanation of your wonder, examine well this Face, (yours, Sir, I well remember) gaze on, and read, in me, your Sister Isa-bella.

Mr. Seal. My Sifter !

Ifab. But here's a Claim more tender yet—your In-

Mr. Seal. O my Child! my Child!

Ind. All-Gracious Heaven! is it possible! do I embrace my Father!

frong for utterance—Rife, rife, my Child, and give my tears their way—O my Sister! [Embracing her.

Isb. Now, dearest Neice, my groundless fears, my painful cares no more shall vex thee. If I have wrong dearest noble Lover with too hard suspicions; my just concern for thee, I hope, will plead my pardou.

Mr. Seal. O! make him then the full amends, and be your felf the Messenger of joy: Fly this instant? tell him all these wondrous turns of Providence in his favour! Tell him I have now a Daughter to bestow, which

which he no longer will decline: that this day he still shall be a Bridegroom: nor shall a Fortune, the Merit which his Father seeks, be wanting: tell him the reward of all his Virtues waits on his acceptance.

Exis Ifab.

My dearest Indiana! [Turns, and embraces her. Ind. Have I then at last a Father's function on my Love! His bounteous hand to give, and make my Heart a present worthy of Bevil's Generosity?

Mr Seal. O my Child! how are our Sorrows past o'erpaid by such a meeting! Though I have lost so many years of soft paternal dalliance with thee, Yet, in one day, to find thee thus, and thus bestow thee, in such perfect happiness! is ample! ample reparation! And yet again the Merit of thy Lover.

Ind O! had I Spirits left to tell you of his actions! how firongly filial duty has suppressed his Love; and how concealment still has doubled all his Obligations; the Pride, the joy of his alliance, Sir, would warm your heart, as he has conquer'd mine.

Mr. Seal. How laudable is Love, when born of Virtue!

I burn to embrace him-

Ind. See, Sir, my Aunt already has succeeded, and brought him to your wishes.

Enter Isabella, with Sir John Bevil, Bevil jun. Mrs. Sealand, Cimberton, Myrtle, and Lucinda.

Sir J. Bev. [Entring] Where! where's this Scene of wonder!—Mr. Sealand, I congratulate, on this occasion, our mutual happiness—Your good Sister, Sir, has, with the Story of your Daughter's fortune, fill'd us with surprize and joy! Now all exceptions are remov'd; my Son has now avow'd his Love, and turn'd all former jealousies and doubts to approbation, and, I am told, your goodness has consented to reward him.

Mr. Seal. If, Sir, a Fortune equal to his Father's hopes, can make this object worthy his acceptance.

Bev. jun. I hear your mention, Sir, of Fortune, with pleasure only, as it may prove the means to reconcile the best of Fathers to my Love - Let him be provident, but let me be happy ___ My ever-destin'd, [Embracing Indiana, iny acknowledg'd Wife!

Ind. Wife! -- O! my ever loved! my Lord! my Mafter!

Sir J. Bev. I congratulate my felf, as well as you, that I had a Son, who could, under such disadvantages, discover your great Merit.

Mr. Seal. O! Sir John! how vain, how weak is Humane-Prudence? What Care, what Forelight, what Imagination could contrive fuch bleft events, to make our Children happy, as Providence in one short hour has laid before us?

Cimb. To Mrs. Sealand I am afraid, Madam, Mr. Sealand is a little too busy for our affaires, if you please we'll take another opportunity.

Mrs. Seal, Let us have patience, Sir. ) During this , Cimb. But we make Sir Geoffry wait, (Bev. jun. pre-Madam. Sents Lucinda Myrt OSir! I am not in hafte. ) to Indiana.

Mr. Seal, But here! here's our general Benefactor? Excellent young Man, that could be, at once, a Lover to her Beauty, and a Parent to her virtue.

Bev. jun. If you think that an obligation, Sir, give me leave to overpay my felf, in the only instance, that can now add to my felicity, by begging you to bestow this Lady on Mr. Myrtle.

Mr. Seal She is his without referve, (I beg he may be fent for )-Mr Cimberton, notwithstanding you never had my consent, yet there is, fince I last faw you; another objection to your Marriage with my Daughter.

Cimb. I hope, Sir, your Lady has conceal'd nothing from me?

Mr. Seal. Troth, Sir, nothing but what was conceal'd from my felf; another Daughter, who has an undoubted title to half my Estate.

Cimb. How! Mr. Sealand; why then if half Mrs. Lucinda's Fortune is gone, you can't fay, that any of my Estate is settled upon her: I was in Treaty for the whole; but if that is not to be come at, to be sure, there can be no bargain. — Sir, — I have nothing to do but to take my leave of your good Lady, my Cousin, and beg pardon for the trouble I have given this Old Gentleman.

Myrt. That you have, Mr. Cimberton, whith all my Heart [Discovers himself.

Omn. Mr. Myrtle!

Myrt. And I beg pardon of the whole Company, that I assumed the Person of Sir Geoffry, only to be present at the danger of this Lady's being disposed of, and in her utmost exigence to assert my Right to her: Which if her Parents will ratisse, as they once favour'd my pretensions, no abatement of Fortune shall lessen her value to me.

Luc. Generous Man!

Mr Seal If, Sir, you can overlook the injury of being in Treaty with one, who as meanly left her, as you have generously afferted your Right in her, she is yours.

Luc Mr. Myrtle, tho' you have ever had my Heart, yet now I find I love you more, because I bring you lefs.

Myrt. We have much more than we want, and I am glad any event has contributed to the discovery of our real Inclinations to each other

Mrs. Seal. Well! however I'm glad the Girl's disposed of any way

Bev. Myrtle! no longer Rivals now, but Brothers.

Myrs. Dear Bevil! you are born to triumph over me! but now our competition ceases: I rejoyce in the preheminence of your Virtue, and your Alliance adds Charms to Lusinds.

THE CONSCIOUS LOVERS

17 Sir 9. Bro. Now , Ladies and Gentlemen , you have for the World a fair example: Your happined is owing to your Conducty and Merit: And the leveral difficulties you have firuggled with, evidently flewer during Charles How ! And String why then it bell bree

To you Whate'er the generous Mind it felf denies The fecret care of Providence Supplies | Exempt. to er the second meior ton it that it tud selector set

destation of the sail.

Cond The Morelet

her vane to me.

there, there can be no bergain; __ Sir, __ I have no thing to co but to take my leave of your goods often revises the location for the coulded have given

heer, That you have solds. Combined which alling

是了特殊等等[数]

And the second of the second s

which it her Parents will ratine, as the work are not be my proceeding, no seasoness of forme first lang

Life. Scherous Men 16 FE 74 OSEOF HAM IN AND have ever had fur Ment.

and sold I should a sport toy stold ball I won toy the tree pur fitter can we were a set ! and what any event has considered to the the tree of or real tochartees or each celler Aug. Sud Well hosteyer I'm glad the Carlow Aug. The פו מהף אימי I saw Merels I no longer Wivals now, but Brodleren and it. Tear Levil! You are lord to this I cour edial estativa I raction or bit incoming won and form testor inches of sour Victies and your Allas of sales Lighter to Landing.

HI of Flarmatt Lity m) Emilia Specer & Hot hip Low or the sommer hyposed Vanghter on the mocent imposter